Ask the Question: Do we want to be harvesters or re-planters?

Questions about how to tackle harness racing's future should not be feared. They will spur a debate that the industry must have.

by Dean Towers

At the USTA meeting on Monday (Feb. 27), Jason Settlemoir of the Meadowlands put forth a motion. He wanted the USTA membership polled to see if they supported the idea of taking a percentage of money from slots to create a slush fund to promote harness racing.

The motion failed 47 to 7.

I understand some of the concerns, like the new USTA President noted in an interview after the vote. But a staunch 47-7 vote against simply asking a broad poll question (with no subsequent discussion even offered), to me, is troubling.

The problem with Jason's question, of course, is that it exhibits an age-old debate in harness racing: the harvesters versus the re-planters.

Harvesters believe total revenue (in this case, purses) is maximized when it's used before it runs out. The re-planters believe that harness racing – although a mature business – can create new markets and increase core revenues with a push. No one knows who’s right, but we do know, so far at least, the harvesters have won every battle.

This view seems to be strangely unique to harness racing, though. It’s simply not that way in other equine pursuits who have chosen a balanced approach.

In 2011, The Jockey Club asked the question, got an answer and went to work. Through the McKinsey Report, they committed member funding to a long-term plan to (hopefully) increase interest in thoroughbred racing.

In year one, it was rumored that over $3 million was spent on initiatives, which included (but weren’t limited to) TV time, a social media team, digital marketing, and “big race” marketing efforts. After testing, in the following years they’ve altered some of the spend allocation, but are still very active, spending a reported $2 million plus each year on the sport.

The jury is out on the efficacy of this spend, but even the initiatives biggest detractors can’t argue that big race and big events have grown in thoroughbred racing the past several years.

Meanwhile, thoroughbred track owners, horsemen and horse owners have stepped up to the plate.

A little over a month ago the Pegasus World Cup was raced at South Florida’s Gulfstream Park. The event – from a front-end revenue perspective – was a huge success with a record $41 million handle. The purse money, put up by owners, was huge, but that wasn’t all that was done.

The Stronach Group spent millions promoting the Cup, with the hopes it would become a self-sustaining entity on the racing calendar every year. Frank Stronach paid NBC to televising the event. His team hired talent such as Thomas Rhett to stage a concert. They embedded the event to an entire local community to attract fans. In addition, in the spirit of cooperation, the rest of the industry paid a higher signal fee to Gulfstream for the race, to ensure more money went back to the home track.

Harness trainer Paul Kelley, who attended the Cup, told Bill Finley, “Sometimes you have to think big. There are thoroughbred people who aren’t afraid to think big. That’s what we don’t do in our sport – think big.”

That they do.

Across the pond, this structure and willingness to commit capital to seed long-term growth is done as a matter of course.

At the wildly successful Hong Kong Jockey Club (where handle and revenue has doubled in eight years), they have never stopped working. In recent years, they’ve committed about $40 million (U.S.) to initiatives that increase wagering and attendance. Most of this – a WeChat platform to enable the smooth flow of racing information, aerial replays, an iPad app, website revamps, track work footage on demand, live WebTV (allowing multiple feeds on one app) and new content – were for both existing and new, tech-savvy bettors.

On a smaller scale, racing in New Zealand asked the question in 2015, raised the money, and went to work. They immediately infused capital (about $17 million (U.S.) per year) into their three year plan for customer and horse owner engagement. Their new fixed odds platform will go live this year.

Each and every one of these entities have asked simple questions – where do we want our business to be in five years? How can we get there? How do we fund it? And they went to work.

For harness racing to succeed its leaders can't ignore the question or sweep it under the rug. To begin to fulfill this sport's potential, through the exploration of new ideas, creating new funding mechanisms and a committing to a workable way forward, the question needs to be asked.

How the evolution of thestable.ca could be an even bigger game-changer

Anthony MacDonald was already onto a good idea with his spin on fractional ownership (www.thestable.ca), but the evolution of that idea is where I think he's really onto something.

Speaking at the USTA annual meeting on Monday (Feb. 27) in Las Vegas, MacDonald proposed that thestable.ca might do for talented trainers down on their luck what it's already doing for those that were looking for an inexpensive way to get into horse ownership to have a little fun.

MacDonald told the story of trainer Harry Poulton – with Poulton's blessing. Poulton, who conditioned Hall of Famers On The Road Again and Matt's Scooter, is currently training just one horse, not because he can't communicate effectively with horses, MacDonald said, but because Poulton isn't quite as gifted at communicating with people. Poulton certainly isn't alone among trainers in that regard.

MacDonald then posed the following: what if Poulton trained some horse for thestable.ca and freed up MacDonald to deal more with the clients and drumming up new investment? Sounds like a win-win.

After all, MacDonald, a Prince Edward Island native that has been blessed with a Maritimer's gift for the gab, seems particularly cut out to be the affable, hard-working, front man. Remember, he ran for political office in Guelph, ON a few years ago. He's a talker.

What if the idea of adding other trainers was expanded to others that have proven records of success, but currently have few horses to train due, partly, to a poor ability to attract and retain owners in the modern era? There's more people out there like that than you might think. I'll refrain from naming them lest I embarrass them, but I'm sure you can think of several former top trainers that are no longer having as much success but are still active and knowledgeable.

MacDonald said his operation might be able to give them the access to stock they need to return to prominence.

Imagine if thestable.ca employed trainers with particular talents and specialties and allocated the right horses to those people. How cool would it be to be a one per cent owner in a horse trained by a Hall of Famer or someone who won a Hambletonian or Meadowlands Pace?

That's just the beginning of where this could go.

At USHWA's Dan Patch Awards just the night before MacDonald addressed the USTA meeting, trainer Jimmy Takter thanked his talented team for helping him land both a third straight Trainer of the Year Award and a major share of the Horse of the Year award for Takter pupil Always B Miki. Apart from his caretakers, Takter singled out his wife, Christina, for being the rock that keeps the stable office running; Perry Soderberg for his expertise at picking out yearlings and Conny Svensson for his talents as a farrier.

Harness Racing Update

Takter not only has extreme talent at conditioning horses, he's also deft at attracting and keeping owners that fund the entire project.

Thestable.ca had modest success in 2016 – perhaps its biggest achievement is that 75 of the original 77 investors re-upped for a 2017 – but MacDonald admitted he was mostly working with mediocre horses. He said people are sticking around because they had fun at a reasonable cost and contends that proves horse owners aren't always fixated on return on investment.

"There is a major market for affordable ownership if you do it the right way," he said.

I contend the secret to long-term engagement is keeping all the things that worked well at thestable.ca and having even more success on the track. Wouldn't we all love to see a huge group of fractional owners in the winner's circle at a major stakes race?

By adapting Takter's model – working with the very best specialists in the industry and letting those people handle the areas they know best – thestable.ca could go from a new model of horse ownership that is a fun way to introduce people to the game, to a truly exceptional operation.

MacDonald already has himself as the man selling the dream and training the string; his partner and wife, Amy, as a key organizational force and his brother, Curtis, as a tech wizard handling the website and piloting the drone that takes 4K video of the horses training so investors from around the world can see their horses on the track.

This is not to denigrate Anthony's training abilities or his eye for picking out a horse, but if he focused most of his energy on communication, contracted some top-notch trainers with particular skill sets that could use some work and added a person or two of Soderberg and Svensson's stature to pick out the horses in the first place and help them excel on the track, the potential would be unlimited.

In other words, build an even better team and let those people play to their strengths all while giving a helping hand to talented people that need it.

Now that would be something to invest in.

BETWEEN THE LINES

No stopping Surick at Freehold

by Brett Sturman

Trainer Nick Surick is in a world of his own these days at Freehold Raceway. The Freehold native has dominated the first two months of the year at the daytime half-mile oval to an astonishing degree.

Through February, Surick has raced 131 starters at Freehold and has won with nearly half of them with 62 wins. He also has finished second 30 times and third 16 times, which means his starters have finished first or second 70 per cent of the time and have hit the board over 82 per cent of the time.

Surick's UTRS (trainer) rating stands at a rarified .641.

What's notable isn't that Surick is the leading trainer this year at Freehold, but the extraordinary rate at which he's been winning. Surick was the track's leading trainer in 2015 and, so far this year, he leads second-place trainer Vincent Fusco by 62 wins to 12 wins. Fusco won the training title last year. At the end of 2016, Surick had 30 wins from 147 starts and through February he's already doubled the win total from all of last year.

Surick sits second in training wins (65) nationally behind only Ron Burke, and all but three of those wins have come at Freehold. Of those three remaining wins, two of them have come at Yonkers (two for 28) and one from Dover (one for 13). Surick is currently winless at the Meadowlands (0 for 13); a track he has had success at in recent years.

How do we explain Surick's remarkable success at Freehold – but no place else?

For starters, almost all Surick-trained horses at Freehold are overwhelming favorites. So overwhelming, in fact, that in recent weeks Freehold has started to bar show wagering in races that have Surick horses. The barring of show wagering isn't uncommon in stakes races where certain horses are superior to their competition, but it's a rare occurrence in overnight racing where fields are more evenly matched (although interestingly enough in the seven races from the past week that didn't allow show wagering, Surick's horses only won three of those).

Trainers enjoying a wave of success will routinely point to their mastery of a condition sheet as one of the main factors in their success. But in Surick's case there is no denying that the Freehold condition sheet plays to his advantage. Specifically, a large majority of Surick-trained winners come from money conditioned events that carry an optional claiming condition. Thursday and Friday this week alone, nine of the 11 horses entered by Surick were eligible in races that they exceeded the earnings conditions for because they were entered in with a claiming tag. This allows the same horses to be jammed in at the same low levels week in and week out.

Of course there's nothing to prevent someone else from stepping in and claiming one of these horses, but how many people out there are looking to claim a $7.5K claimer to race for $3,000 or a $5K claimer to race for $2,500. Also, no one wants to claim off a trainer batting .500 for the obvious reason that they might not have the key to reach the same level of success for the horse.

I remember a few years ago when trainer Lou Pena achieved similar success with claimers and racing secretaries from all over were forced to restructure the conditions of their races. I realize that sometimes multiple conditions need to be combined in order to fill races, but a parade of heavy favorites (even more-so than usual, which is saying something) isn't in the best interest of the track and Freehold bears some accountability in this instance. At the very least, the track should explore the possibility of mixing up the condition sheet and make the earning conditioned and claiming conditioned races independent on one another so that races can be more competitive. Freehold has had the same condition sheet for as long as I can remember and this appears to be as good a time as any to consider making changes.

Other factors could be the training colony at Freehold bears no resemblance to what it once was and Surick simply is hands-down better than what his peers consist of. Similarly, the drivers for Surick-trained horses lay over much of the Freehold driving colony. Andy Miller drives routinely, but Brett Miller was in town on Thursday for all Surick drives and even George Brennan got in on the action and made a cameo last Saturday.

Perhaps the best question though is why Freehold to begin with. Convenience of the location aside, Surick is someone who has become accustomed to racing on the big stage and has trained or been associated with numerous Grand Circuit winning horses. With that level of success and still being in the early stages of his career, why apply that craft predominantly to lesser quality stock and meager purses?

Exactly half of the current Freehold meet is now in the books and it will be interesting to see if Nick Surick can keep up the seemingly unsustainable pace throughout the close of the season on the first Saturday in May. If he comes anything close to it, he'll go down as the most dominant trainer ever at Freehold over the course of a meet.

Woodbine, Saturday March 4

Race 2: Check out fresh import OUR SKY MAJOR N for trainer Duane Marfisi; that was some mile upon debut two weeks ago! Although out of Down-Under mare Sky Beauty, he's sired by Art Major and he could be quite a force on the WEG circuit very soon. He was that good in his first race here that the technical step up in condition shouldn't mean anything and I hate to even take a dead chalk in this print but I actually think something in the area of 4-5 would be fair; we'll see. JJS DELIVERY worked himself too high up in class and should find this group more to his liking; faces a tough foe in #5. ROCKIN WIZARD makes his fourth start off the layoff and he's immediately found his better form; will be heard from.

$40 Win 5

$5 Exacta 5/4,8

Race 4: DOVUTO HANOVER was claimed last out for an apparent bargain purchase of $15,000. He steps up but lands the rail to compensate and more importantly driver and trainer Cullen has been sharp of late; I think he'll fire at first asking in the new barn. COBALT MAN is the obvious one to beat despite starting from the outside and he has loads of speed to overcome it; fastest on paper. MUSSELSFRMBRUSSELS would have easily dispatched of these if the race were a month ago but it doesn't look like that trip to Yonkers and the Meadowlands was worth it; drops too. BANK SHOT HANOVER makes his third start back from the layoff for Allard; exits a confidence building score.

$10 Win/Place 1

$2 Exacta Box 1-5-6-8

Race 9: PRESCOTTS HOPE drops to an unusually low level and this unreliable type is more than fast enough to beat these if right; 7-year-old gelding seeks to get back on track and he'll likely take some action. TRACEUR HANOVER is the other big dropper in here for Moreau and he lost a tough one two back to the classy Domethatagain; will be firing out for Fillion. THE ROCKINATOR debuts for Allard and those miles from Miami Valley don't look bad; I'd be inclined to include if the price was right.

$15 Win 9

$3 Exacta Box 6-7-9

Smoke Pan Mirrors is a beloved Magie family member

by Ken Weingartner / Harness Racing Communications / USTA

Judy Magie gets emotional when she talks about Smoke Pan Mirrors. The 10-year-old female pacer might not be a household name around the nation, but she is a beloved member of the Magie family's home in central New Jersey.

Purchased as a yearling for $5,500 by Judy and her husband, trainer Brian Magie Jr., at the 2008 Standardbred Horse Sale, Smoke Pan Mirrors has won 39 of 271 career races and earned $409,108 in purses.

She's done it the hard way, never winning a race worth more than $20,000 and never competing in a claiming race. She has never won more than $72,202 in a season, or less than $33,348, and averaged nearly 40 starts a year since turning age six. And she just keeps going.

On Thursday night, Smoke Pan Mirrors finished eighth in a conditioned race at the Meadowlands won by Amanderosa. Brett Miller was in Smoke Pan Mirrors' sulky. Her race led the one-hour "Meadowlands Harness Live" broadcast on SNY.

"When we bought her at the sale that day, never would I have imagined what she's been to my family," Judy said. "You can always count on her to take care of us. It's a blessing. It's a huge blessing. She's really been a gift from God. We love her. We just treat her like family, because she is. She's just been so good to us."

Smoke Pan Mirrors is a daughter of stallion No Pan Intended out of the broodmare Sleight Of Pan. She was Sleight Of Pan's sixth foal, but first by 2003 Horse of the Year No Pan Intended.

"We noticed a lot of times that mares bred to No Pan Intended would come to life, so to speak," Brian said. "We were going mostly on conformation, and she was gorgeous. The fact the mare had a few foals, and this was the first No Pan Intended, we liked that combination. We were thrilled to get her. We loved her."

Smoke Pan Mirrors raced on the Pennsylvania Sire Stakes circuit at age 2, finishing second to future multiple-stakes-winner Dancinwiththstarz in her series debut. She also finished second in a division of the Arden Downs that season. At 3, she won twice in the Pennsylvania Sire Stakes Stallion Series. Two years later, she posted one of her biggest victories, winning the Fillies & Mares Open at Tioga Downs.

She might be one of the hardest-working women in harness racing. Smoke Pan Mirrors has started at least one race in 84 of the past 85 months, including the most recent 21 in a row. And if you're a driver, there's a good chance you've sat behind her. A total of 53 different drivers have been in the sulky for her races.

"She's been so durable and enjoys her job, so it's kind of hard to shut her down," Brian said. "In this day and age, with the hard racetracks and the style of racing, you don't find this durability just anywhere. I think it's just a tribute to her conformation; she was put together the way you want a horse to be put together. The drivers all love her. Nobody says she's a Cadillac anymore, but she always has been.

"We just hope that someday she passes those traits off to her offspring. We're looking forward to the day when we can train one of her babies. I think in my heart that she will be a good broodmare."

Ken Weingartner

Smoke Pan Mirrors resides in a stall at the end of a row nearest the stable's office. In the stall next to her is 9-year-old stallion Voice Of Truth, himself a $456,177-earner in his career, bred by Judy Magie and Pine Creek Stables.

"They're like an old married couple," Judy said. "They're just as happy as can be."

Keeping Smoke Pan Mirrors happy is one of the keys to her longevity on the racetrack. She has a routine – first out to the field in the morning and then last to jog or train, followed immediately by lunch.

"She's a bit of a diva," Judy said, laughing, "But she's just a really fun horse."

"She's set in her ways, just like most women," Brian said, also laughing. "But she's a sweetheart. My one-year-old son (Luke) could walk in there and she wouldn't hurt him. She's good to be around. She's a pleasure. She doesn't owe us anything. We have great respect for her and what she's done over the years. We're always trying to think about what's best for her."

When the time comes for Smoke Pan Mirrors to retire from racing and focus on motherhood, she will do it right at home.

"She'll get to spend the rest of her life as a broodmare at our house. We still have Voice Of Truth's mother (Shandelle Hanover). They bought our farm, so they'll get to live out their days there.

"I'm happy to be able to do that for her."

Trainer Chris Oakes' barn destroyed by tornado

WNEP-TV in Scranton, PA has reported (full story here) that a confirmed EF-2 tornado with wind speeds up to 120 mph touched down Sunday in parts of Luzerne and Lackawanna Counties near Wilkes-Barre, PA destroying the barn owned by trainer Chris Oakes.

Fortunately, Oakes' wife and kids were fine and the 30 horses that would usually be in the barn were in Florida for the winter.

Oakes flew home from Florida to inspect the damage. Beyond a barn that was leveled, his equipment was damaged and his fence was strewn across the lawn.

"I think it's even worse than I thought," Oakes said. "I expected nothing and man, to see a life's work, all of a sudden in a pile of rubble. It's a kick in the you know what."

Cleanup will take quite some time, but Oakes is relieved everyone is safe.

"The blessing is my wife and my kids are fine. None of the horses were affected, so at the end of the day, all of the stuff can be replaced and rebuilt. The family is good, so I'm good," he said.

Oakes was one of several dealing with damage in Bear Creek Township as crews worked throughout the day to restore power. In some cases, crews had to use cranes to move trees that toppled over.

Out-of-competition testing approved in PA

The Pennsylvania Horse Racing Commission (PHRC) passed an Out-Of-Competition Testing Program this week, stating the purpose is, "to test the horse for performance enhancing substances that may not otherwise be detected with post-race testing," and "to deter the use of these substances."

The program specifies, "any horse that has been engaging in activities related to competing in horse racing in Pennsylvania may be tested." This will include not only horses training in Pennsylvania, entered to race in Pennsylvania, or stabled in Pennsylvania, but also any horse:

- "under the care or control of a trainer licensed by the commission;"
- "owned by an owner licensed by the commission;"

- "entered or nominated to race at a premises licensed by the commission;"
- "raced within the previous 12 months at a premises licensed by the commission;"
- "nominated to a program based on racing in the jurisdiction, including... breeder's award fund, or standardbred state sires stakes."

USHWA business meetings conclude in Vegas

The United States Harness Writers Association (USHWA), the world's largest organization for industry communicators, conducted its annual two days of business meetings this past weekend at the Planet Hollywood hotel/casino along "the Strip" in Las Vegas, NV. The weekend culminated in the Sunday evening celebration of the sport's best and brightest stars of 2016, both human and equine, at the annual Dan Patch Annual Banquet, for which Hoosier Park in Indiana joined with USHWA as its first Dan Patch title presenters.

The presence of Hoosier Park, and several other high-recognition entities of the sport providing sponsorship of phases of the Dan Patch Banquet, was reflective of the hard work of many individuals in shoring up the financial bottom line of the organization, and then developing a plan upon which to expand and help make USHWA's economic base even stronger.

This was perhaps the major theme of the USHWA weekend meetings, with Florida member Tom Hicks earning USHWA's Member of the Year award for spearheading a diverse, hard-working committee that took a look at all of USHWA's spending and income of recent years, and tried to find ways to minimize the former while maximizing the latter. A detailed report, emphasizing expansion of avenues of income, especially through the group's website (www.ushww.org), was prepared, explained, and distributed to the assembled as a baseline for ongoing activities.

Association economics were very much prevalent in the annual by-law and rules & regulations change proposals. One proposition argued in most years again was taken to a vote: the debate whether it was more advantageous to continue the current method of announcing Horse, Trotter, and Pacer of the Year at the end of the calendar season to take advantage of international press exposure, or to announce these awards for the first time at the Dan Patch

Banquet in order to heighten the drama and perhaps bring in additional revenue (e.g., through sponsoring streaming video). This year's tabulation revealed that both sides' arguments had merit: 20 directors voted to move the announcement to the banquet while 15 favored keeping the announcement at year's end, but this vote meant that the announcement will stay when it is, as under USHWA's by-laws a 2/3 majority (here, 23 votes) would have been necessary for a by-law change.

The directors of USHWA also voted on the two ballot candidates for this summer's election for the Communicators Hall of Fame. Veteran Midwest announcer and auctioneer Carl Becker garnered the most support; the contest for the second spot was extremely tight, with the nod going to Dave Briggs of Harness Racing Update, who at the banquet would collect his record ninth John Hervey Award for excellence in writing about the standardbred sport.

USHWA's officers generally work on a two-year cycle, and since this was an "off-year" election, the same officials were retained for another year: Tim Bojarski as president; Shawn Wiles as 1st vice-president; Kim Rinker as 2nd vice-president; Chris Tully as chairman of the board; Barry Lefkowitz as treasurer; and Jerry Connors as secretary.

VP Pinsonneault leaving WEG

Woodbine Entertainment Group (WEG) announced on Wednesday (March 1), that Sean Pinsonneault, the company's executive vice-president, strategy and wagering, will be leaving the organization on March 7.

Pinsonneault, 47, came to Woodbine in 2000 as the director of wagering, then in 2010, became executive vice-president and chief operating officer. He has represented the company through his position as secretary director of the Thoroughbred Racing Associations (TRA), chairman and president of Racetracks of Canada, and through his active involvement in other international organizations and committees.

Pinsonneault led growth efforts in several aspects of the company's business through a transformational era in the industry. Key among those is the strategic development of the company's wagering concepts and its HPIbet digital platform, and stewardship of WEG's innovation division.

"I'm very proud to have been able to contribute to the many accomplishments of the WEG team during my tenure at the company," said Pinsonneault. "I leave confident that this great group of people will continue to develop and improve to drive this business forward. I want to thank all of my WEG colleagues and industry stakeholders for their collaborations and support over the years and with whom I look forward to crossing paths in future opportunities."

"Woodbine Entertainment Group has benefitted from Sean's valuable insights and knowledge for the last 16 years and his contributions to the horse racing industry in Canada are far-reaching. He will surely be missed by many," said WEG's CEO Jim Lawson. "We respect his decision to move on to new professional challenges and wish him the very best."

More than $5,000 awarded in Big M Own-A-Horse contest

The second month of the Meadowlands Racetrack's Own A Horse promotion gave 10 more fans an inside look at racehorse ownership and the results continue to show there are few thrills like owning a winning horse.

The 10 fans won a combined $5,122 during February with the biggest chunk of that amount coming courtesy of Jacksruckytoo who won three times during the month for trainer Patti Harmon.

His "owners" for the month were Deborah Schreyer and Richard Curley. Like all of the contestants, they were invited to the track each week when their horse raced, were given an all-access VIP pass to meet their horse and driver in the race paddock, and winner's circle photos if their horse was lucky enough to win.

"We totally lucked out on getting Jacksruckytoo," said Curley, who won $1,859 during the contest. "It was an unbelievable experience and thank you to the Meadowlands."

Ten new fans have been selected to participate in the contest during March. The Own A Horse promotion will continue to run each month throughout the Meadowlands racing season. Fans may register online by visiting the Own A Horse page on the track's website.

Jackpot Hi-5 mandatory payout date announced

Woodbine Entertainment Group (WEG) has announced a mandatory payout date of Saturday, March 11 for the current Standardbred Jackpot Hi-5.

Horseplayers will have three more opportunities to wager on the Woodbine Racetrack Jackpot Hi-5, which currently has a carryover of $476,469, before the wager is suspended following this Saturday's card (March 4) in preparation for the mandatory payout.

The current Jackpot Hi-5 carryover has been growing since Jan. 7, which was the first card to offer Hi-5 wagering following a mandatory payout on Dec. 23.

The most recent mandatory payout (Dec. 23) had more than $2 million of new money wagered into the pool, which featured a carryover of $548,396, to create a total pool of $2.6 million.

A winning $0.20 ticket on the Dec. 23 Jackpot Hi-5 returned $4,842.70.

The Dec. 23 mandatory payout was not the first time the total pool exceeded $2 million.

A mandatory payout on Oct. 24, 2015 at Woodbine generated a total pool of more than $2.2 million, with $1.6 million of new money wagered into the Hi-5 that evening. The $0.20 payout was $12,746.60

On Aug. 30, 2014 at Mohawk, the Jackpot Hi-5 total pool was $2.5 million, while a mandatory payout on May 17, 2014

at Woodbine had a total pool of $2 million.

The Jackpot Hi-5 requires horseplayers to select the top-five finishers in order and features a $0.20 minimum wager with a 15 per cent takeout.

More details regarding the mandatory payout on March 11 will be distributed following this Saturday's card. Post time for live racing Friday and Saturday at Woodbine is 7:30 p.m.

Long shots trigger Pick Five carryover at Meadowlands

Back-to-back $100-plus winners helped trigger a carryover in the Pick Five at the Meadowlands on a long shot's delight Thursday (March 2).

The $25,497 carryover will be up for grabs on tonight's program. The Pick Five covers the first five races of the night. It carries a 50-cent base wager and a low 15-percent takeout rate that should almost be eliminated with the carryover.

The last time there was a Pick Five carryover was Dec. 22, 2016. The $25,874 carryover attracted $212,276 in new money. The winning sequence then returned nearly $18,000.

Tony Beltrami kicked off the long shot parade in the GSY Club race when Scirocco Jakob paid $112.60. In the next race, Tom Merton put Mr. Julian on the front end and never looked back, scoring at $117.80. Kyle Husted ensured the carryover in race five when he steered $66.00 winner Wegottatruckyea to win. Husted won three races Thursday, more than doubling his season win total.

The early Pick Four that included three of those big payoffs returned $30,687.95 to one lucky horseplayer in Las Vegas.

Jim Marohn, Jr. swept the late double to increase his narrow lead over Brett Miller in the 2017 leading driver race.

Total handle was $1,381,272 on the nine-race card.

Live racing resumes tonight with an 11-race card. Post time is 7:15 p.m. For more information, visit
