Nickells overwhelmed by Hall of Fame honor

Eighty-seven-year-old veteran Bruce Nickells said he cried when he received the call telling him the United States Harness Writers Association's screening committee had voted him into the Hall of Fame.

Class of 2016 Hall of Famer Bruce Nickells last week at Sunshine Meadows in Florida.

Bruce Nickells was driving when the call came informing him he had been elected to the Harness Racing Hall of Fame. As the words he was hearing began to swim around his head, he asked the caller to phone back in 10 minutes. Nickells then pulled over and started to cry.

"Look at me, I'm almost in tears now," Nickells said last week at Sunshine Meadows, pointing to tears welling in his 87-year-old blue eyes.

"Of all the people in this industry, there's thousands of families that devoted their lives to this and they never get a mention. They're the ones that made this industry what it is today. Me, I'm a little old guy that came from a little old town of 2,500 people. Look what I've got," he said.

The night before — two nights before he was to give a speech at the Dan Patch Awards dinner in Fort Lauderdale, FL — Nickells woke up at 3 a.m. and couldn't get back to sleep.

"I woke up at 3 o'clock this morning thinking about a speech. I said the same thing over and over, about eight, nine words. I couldn't go back to sleep. I'll be glad when Monday's here."

As it was, despite being armed with a speech written for him by Bob Marks, Nickells went off the cuff and made one of the briefest speeches in Hall of Fame history that Sunday.

"I think with all the great horses I've had over the years there's really not much else to say," he said.

One presumes Nickells will give a longer speech when he is officially inducted July 3 at the Harness Racing Museum and Hall of Fame in Goshen, NY — "I'm going to be worse. I'll probably be sick." — but don't expect him to be verbose, unless the conversation resolves around horses.

On a sunny Saturday morning, it wasn't long before Nickells and Marks were kibitzing about the old days and remembering great horses Nickells trained over 70 years in the business.

"The horse that scared me the most of any horse I ever had was a horse called Great Dune. That was the horse I drove in my first race. I was scared to death," Nickells said, laughing at the memory of that 1949 drive at Aurora Downs in Illinois that came when he was 21, about eight years after he got his start at age 13 as a part-time groom with the late C.F. Rumley.

By 1953, Nickells had his own stable.

Marks said his first memory of Nickells was driving a horse named Warts.

"That was the first horse that he ever drove at Roosevelt Raceway," Marks said. "It was 17 hands lobster and it was like a B3 pacer, but it was brother to a very good filly named Concrete Lady who would qualify as an open mare today. I never forgot. The first time I saw him drive was probably '63 or '62 and he was driving Warts."

Nickells developed some outstanding horses early in his career, including Scribe Rodney, Combat Time, Batman, Kentucky, and Fast Clip. He soon caught the attention of some of the sport's biggest owners. His work with the great mare Follow My Star resulted in a partnership with mega-owner Lou Guida.

Nickells went on to train six freshman divisional winners and/or the richest freshman filly of the year.

Miss Easy won 25 of her 32 lifetime starts (including an 11-race win streak), with earnings of $1,777,656. Nickells' work with her earned him the 1991 Glen Garnsey Trainer of the Year award.

Miss Easy was a repeat divisional winner as a sophomore, but Nickells said he trained a better filly.

"Miss Easy was great, but John Campbell always said Immortality was better than Miss Easy," Nickells said. "She was the easiest horse I ever trained. Miss Easy was a tough horse to train. She had trouble getting around mile-track turns. Immortality was absolutely perfect."

Perretti Farms bred Immortality and Marks, the farm's former publicity director, said he remembers her as a baby.

"I used to watch her in the field. She would be running and her mother couldn't keep up with her. Her mother was Jef's Eternity and she couldn't even keep up with her."

Nickells said the reason Guida landed Immortality as a yearling is because he had a $100,000 credit with Perretti Farms.

"She cost $97,000," Marks said. "I was on the stand... We had three people bidding. I was supposed to sell that horse for $200,000. They look over and they see Guida and they both stopped."

Immortality won 13 of 15 starts at two in 1992 – finishing second in the other two starts – and earned over $1 million that year.

Other top horses for Nickells include: Hambletonian Oaks winner Park Avenue Kathy, Central Park West, Hazleton Kay, Immortality, Freedoms Friend, Bruce's Lady, Efishnc and six Breeders Crown champions.

"I had a good run there. My wife died and I kind of backed off and I shouldn't have," he said. "I should have kept right on going, but I just didn't. It's too late now for me to crank it up again."

Today, Nickells has handed the reins of his stable over to his daughter Brooke. Yet, he is still as busy as ever.

"We've got 12 here (in Florida) and a bunch more up north. I'm supposed to be retired, but I get up and I'm out here on the track at 6:30 in the morning. I'm working harder now than before," he said laughing.

Going into the Hall of Fame won't change that – or Bruce Nickells – one bit.

The incredible intertwined history between the Yankees and Keller's Yankeeland

Dave Landry

Yankeeland's Charlie Keller III (shown in this 2006 file photo) is also among the Hall of Fame class of 2016

Charlie Keller III of Yankeeland Farms of Maryland is getting ready to enter the Hall Of Fame. His father was a New York Yankees outfielder on some of the most famous baseball teams of all time. I thought we'd have a little fun connecting the racing Yankees and the baseball Yankees. Here goes:

- The 1970 Horse Of The Year, Fresh Yankee, defeated the HOY the year before (Nevele Pride) and was to become the first North American bred $1 million earner. The 1970 Rookie Of The Year in the American League was Thurman Munson ("FRESH" Yankee). He played with one of the all-time icons when first called up in spring training in 1968 – Mickey Mantle. Munson later was voted the league's MVP in 1976.
- The 1977 World Series was won by the Yankees. No Yankee team had won the World Series since 1962. Also in 1977, NO NO YANKEE won the first ever Woodrow Wilson held at the Meadowlands, going in and emerging undefeated for owner Paul Fontaine.

- In 1998, Muscles Yankee won the Hambletonian, the Kentucky Futurity and the Breeders Crown and was voted the best three-year-old trotter of the season. The same year, the Yankees proved to be the strongest in baseball, too, winning 125 games and sweeping the World Series against the Braves. Muscles Yankee's strength was apparent after he raced too. He sired three straight Hambletonian winners from 2008-2010. In 2009, he sired his greatest son to win the trotting classic – Muscle Hill. Coincidentally, the Yankees won the World Series that season to break a nine-year drought.
- In 2000, Yankee Paco won the Hambletonian and did not lose a race all summer. The New York Yankees had a pretty good summer of their own winning the pennant and then capturing the Subway Series against the New York Mets.
- In 2004, the New York Yankees became the first team in baseball history to have a 3-0 lead in a playoff

This week's harness racing pop quiz!

I thought we'd change it up for this column. Let's have a pop quiz. The winner gets a free subscription to Harness Racing Update. Yes, I know it's already free, but roll with me on this one. The prize budget is tight.

Let's go!

Question 1

Trainer Bob Shedrow had a horse test positive for xenopropoaleyne, an exotic Malaysian drug. This drug has opiate properties and makes horses go really, really fast. According to Internet rumor, trainer Bob got the drug in a bar on the west side of Kuala Lumpur; you know, the bar where they shot that scene from the movie the Hangover II.

Trainer Bob's penalty should be:

- a) $1 trillion fine
- b) $1 trillion fine and a lifetime ban
- c) $1 trillion fine, a lifetime ban and he needs to be strung up from a tree
- d) I don't know. What are the circumstances around this positive?

Although I understand those who wish for a, b, or c, the correct answer, without fail, is “d”.

We've seen this time and time again: A positive result from a spike on a chart in your neighborhood horse testing lab occurs. The result is released from the commission (sometimes this occurs without it being released) and because it's a Class A or B drug, a two-to-five or 10- year suspension is handed down. There's rampant speculation and everyone's opinions are hardened. When Bob walks through the barn in the morning, people move to the other side of it; like high school, with horses.

Then, a month later, trainer Bob pays for a test himself that shows the levels of this nasty drug at 1 picogram – about one ten millionth of a grain of salt; an amount that would not even affect a really small ant. Further, trainer Bob has never been to Malaysia, and has never seen the Hangover II (or I or III for that matter). The evidence shows Bob has no clue what happened and there certainly was no intent.

All of that could've been avoided if the sport takes a breath after a positive is released. I am not speaking about sweeping things under the rug like some would like – that's silly and wrong – and I am not saying Bob doesn't need to be more vigilant with stable management where he gets let off with nothing. I am just saying that the way this business handles positive tests needs some work.

I hope you're with me and chose “d”.

Question 2 - True or False?

“Harness racing is dead. No matter what we do, handle can not improve. No one is betting any longer, no one is buying horses. It's as dead as an MC Hammer concert, the hula hoop, or New Coke. Dead, I tell ya.”

The correct answer is false.

Do you know what harness and greyhound (the so-called “unwanted gambling sports”) turnover was in 2000 in Australia? It was $2.4 billion. Do you know what it was last year? It was $6.2 billion.

Those two codes moved up the ladder while sports betting was introduced (and thrived) and thoroughbred wagering grew as well. Although harness racing has many issues, and greyhounds and thoroughbreds have done better, it is – unlike here in North America since 2000 – increased market share through more handle.

How they've done that is an exercise most would be encouraged to study. Fixed odds wagering (like sports betting) and exchange wagering was introduced. Although this wagering has lower takeout and doesn't pay as much margin than the old-school TAB wagering did, it has helped the sport to remain relevant with new players, and those seeking value.

In addition, the modernization of wagering has brought money back from offshore. A problem for a lot of gambling enterprises and games.

Source: H2 Gambling Capital, eGaming Data Set, February 2012

Harness racing gambling is not dead. The sport in North America has probably just not tried hard enough.

Question 3

Our bettors really dislike the following:

- a) Trot races
- b) Stakes races
- c) Conditioned races
- d) Cheap claimers

When the Meadowlands recently announced (primarily due to horse shortages with new slots-fed competition opening) they were carding $7,500 claimers, some folks in the sport had a conniption.

"The flagship track carding cheap claimers? That will kill handle!"

Actually, no. During this meet, the ten claimers at the Big M garnered $222,000 of handle – more than some harness tracks do on an entire card. In thoroughbred racing it is not much different, with over a million dollars bet on some cheap claimers at big tracks like Gulfstream.

Bettors want big competitive fields and bet them accordingly. The answer to this question is most certainly not "d".

Question 4 - True or False?

"If we increase purse money, handle will improve."

The answer is apparent if you look at numbers out of Philadelphia Park. Parx purses have tripled, while handle has gone down.

This was also addressed in Thalheimer's seminal study at the University of Louisville which stated, "wagering would increase by only six per cent if purse were doubled. This is a surprising finding considering the importance that is attached to the purse variable in all major policy decisions to increase the wagering in this industry."

Question 5 - True or False?

"Harness racing should not commit money to "promote" itself because all we see are bad stories about drugs, PETA protests, mistreatment of animals and assorted other bad things about us. We don't need the mainstream media picking them up."

Well, Phoo's Boy would say this is a big fat false.

In 2012, a two-and-a-half month foal and his mother were dropped off at a farm they would call home until the foal would hopefully embark on his training career. On Friday evening, everything was fine.

At some point overnight, something wasn't fine. The next morning, they found the little son of Art Colony with a two-inch bullet wound in his neck, with an exit wound 10 inches in diameter. He was still alive and brought to a clinic. His owner:

"I put a flashlight to his neck and could see his vertebrae. I kept thinking, he's going to have to be put down. But I walked into the stall and he came over to me and put his head against my belly and I said, 'that's it buddy, we're going to try and save you.'"

After a long road, Phoo's Boy made it, and began his racing career in earnest, just last month.

The idiot kids who shot this poor horse, failed to get the job done. They didn't count on the toughness of the standardbred and the people who care for them.

There are hundreds of great people in the game; there are hundreds of stories that are not much different than that. They need to be told.

I hope you enjoyed this week's Pop Quiz and I'd wager you all scored 100 per cent.

Banking on your horse's future

Stem cells on ice could enhance your horse's athletic potential.

by Karen Briggs

Standardbred owner and breeder Mark Wasserman is banking on cryogenically frozen umbilical cord tissue as the future of equine stem cell therapy.

"I got interested in stem cell therapy because I'd used it on my own horses and had pretty good success," Wasserman said. "Then one day last year I was talking to my daughter about her decision to save and freeze umbilical cord blood, when my grandchildren were born. I started researching stem cells from the umbilical cord, and it became clear to me that mesenchymal stem cells (MSCs), not from the cord blood, but from a type of tissue in the umbilical cord called Wharton's jelly, are by far the best stem cells for equine use, and they are available in much larger quantities in that tissue than in any other tissue that you can source for stem cells."

This umbilical cord sample was received this year at Equi-Stem's lab. Later, it was processed and cryogenically stored.

While stem cells can be sourced from a horse's bone marrow (usually from the sternum) or from the adipose (fat) tissue near the tail-head, the extraction procedures are expensive, invasive and risky. In addition, Wasserman said, while the stem cells from marrow or adipose tissue are considered versatile – in other words, they can mature into many different types of cells – the MSCs from umbilical cord tissue are truly 'toti-potent'.

"They have better powers of proliferation than any other type of stem cell," he said. "They can mature into virtually any kind of cell, including neurons and cardiac muscle cells. Their potential is limitless.

"At first, I just wanted to figure out how to make stem cells from umbilical cord tissue available to my own horses. And then I saw it could go far beyond that."

Research director Dr. Todd Flower (PhD in Biochemistry and Molecular Biology) in the Equi-Stem lab in Pennsylvania.

Wasserman launched Detroit, MI-based Equi-Stem LLC in the spring of 2015, with input from Keith Merritt, DVM, and consulting biochemist and molecular biologist, Todd Flowers, Ph.D. The company now offers a simple and affordable way to collect and cryogenically store umbilical cord tissue when a foal is born. An annual storage fee ensures that that tissue can be accessed whenever that horse is in need of stem cell therapy, and approximately $450 (U.S.) will get you a therapeutic dose of stem cells within hours of requesting it.

"That's about a quarter of the price of the (stem cell) injections currently available," Wasserman said.

"The great part is that these cells are like no others you can get. It's totally non-invasive, you get the therapeutic dose much more quickly than you would with bone marrow or adipose extraction, and we made it affordable, I think. But you only get one chance to collect that cord tissue."

To that end, Equi-Stem offers free collection kits, which make collection and shipping of the cord tissue straightforward and simple. There's a 72-hour window after a foal is born to ship the material, after which it is flash-frozen with liquid nitrogen to -320 degrees in Equi-Stem's lab in Lancaster, PA.

"We have hundreds and hundreds of samples already," said Equi-Stem's business development specialist, Tara Long, "and knock wood, all of them have been viable. We expect the tissue to be viable for the life of the horse. Stem cells have been stored for over 30 years and they still have 70 per cent viability."

Horsepeople have been quick to recognize the advantages of freezing cord tissue. Winbak Farm and Blue Chip Farms are two of the larger operations who have become Equi-Stem clients. “Blue Chip saw the benefit of this right away,” said Wasserman. “To our knowledge, they are (freezing cord tissue) from all the foals this year.”

Equi-Stem is also beginning to expand into the thoroughbred and sport horse markets.

Long anticipates that having umbilical cord tissue available will be a benefit that will soon be noted in yearling sales catalogues. “We think we can establish some type of symbol in catalogues and racing programs to indicate the stem cells are available. When a horse changes ownership, the new owner just has to take over paying the annual storage fee for as long as they want the stem cells to be accessible.”

While stem cell therapy has already proven its worth in speeding the healing of tendon and ligament injuries, Wasserman expects that it will prove to have applications far beyond that. “One of our goals is to make horses race longer, and come back from injury faster. We think now that we’re making it more affordable, stem cell therapy has amazing potential for maintenance as well as rehabilitation. It’s not like joint injections, where you’re just keeping the horse going – stem cells actually cure stuff. They repair damaged tissue.

“The technology is moving forward very quickly. Stem cells are going to be used to treat more than just tendons and ligaments. We hope to focus on bleeding and on Equine Protozoal Myelitis (EPM) in the future. And we’re working on some other MSC derivatives and products as well.

“We have an amazing team of Ph.D. researchers who are all working together, with some tremendous ideas for the industry. It’s very exciting.”

Decoupling reprieve should be call to action

by Joe Pennacchio

This week’s attempts at expanding gambling in Florida were not unexpected. Obviously, Florida’s horsepeople are relieved that the end-run full decoupling amendments floated during these past few days were unsuccessful, but more important than that, we are pleased to know that our state legislators have taken pause to recognize and better understand the far-reaching positive economic impact of the thoroughbred, quarter horse and standardbred industries here in the “Horse Capital of the World.”

With Florida’s laser focus on creating business and jobs, our horsemen – racehorse owners, trainers, breeders and their employees – have often felt disenfranchised as to why their economic contributions don’t seem to be on the political radar. Indeed, during this session, thousands of people who do business in Florida’s horse racing industry and the tens of thousands of people we employ seemed to be almost unwanted, if not oddly cast aside as disposable and non-human in the push by big casinos to put a one-armed bandit on every Florida corner.

Horsepeople don’t think there will ever be an appropriate time or place to diminish the importance of anyone’s job or business, especially when it garners the type of big money, international interest and financial success that Florida’s horse racing industry does.

Make no mistake, however. There will be no reprieve. Like a giant money-sucking vacuum to Florida’s economy, the big casino expansion forces behind decoupling are plotting their return, of that horsepeople are 100 per cent certain.

Meanwhile, slot revenue will continue to be put to work in Florida the way voters intended – hand in hand with live racing days to provide economic incentives that keep us competitive with more aggressive horse racing and breeding programs in other states; states that actively continue to try to lure away our best owners, trainers, jockeys, drivers, horses and – most importantly – our many hardworking people who contribute to Florida’s economy far beyond what any stand-alone slot machine could ever do.”

– Joe Pennacchio is president and executive director of Florida Standardbred Breeders and Owners Association (FSBOA).

Second reading Monday on NJ casino bills

Monday will be a session day in the New Jersey Senate in Trenton, with high-profile bills on the future of Atlantic City and casino gaming in North Jersey going on to their second readings on the floor.

In a March 7 story by Brent Johnson on NJ.com, the author wrote that if voters approve two new casinos in the north of the state, those casinos likely will be taxed much higher than those in Atlantic City.

Johnson wrote that "State Assemblyman Ralph Caputo (D-Essex) said at a public hearing on the plan that the state could impose a tax rate of 40 to 60 per cent on the casinos' revenue. That's much higher than the 9.25 percent tax rate that Atlantic City's gambling halls pay."

Though Johnson said Meadowlands Racetrack owner Jeff Gural has offered to pay a high tax rate in Caputo's range, State Senate President Stephen Sweeney (D-Gloucester) has said the rate should be lower to make sure the casinos can thrive.

Three-fifths of both the state Senate and Assembly would need to approve the resolution for it to go before voters this November, though leaders of both houses are confident they can reach that mark. The tax rate is not included in the resolution. Leaders have said that would be figured out in later legislation.

Down Under on top of the World

"It has been a pleasure to be involved, an honor to be invited and amazing to be able to win," and with that Kerryn Manning accepted the first International All Star Series title. The Victorian champion sealed the series with a seventh placing at Tabcorp Park Melton on Saturday (March 12) in Flemington, Australia, when the 22nd and final race was held among Pryde's EasiFeed Great Southern Star night.

Her success and accumulated 165.5 points also helped The Vics eclipse The World team 719-712, despite New Zealand's Dexter Dunn (158) and USA driver Brett Miller (152.5) enjoying outstanding weeks to fill out the minor placings.

"I started slow but got a bit of momentum up as the week went on and have had a very good week," Manning said.

In fact, the Great Western trainer/driver was last on the leaderboard after day one with 15 points, but a victory at Echuca on Tuesday on day two and three second placings at Maryborough on day three soon had Manning back in contention. Two victories on both days four (Ballarat) and five (Bendigo) gave Manning a 10.5-point lead over Dunn heading into the final day, which would prove unassailable.

"It has been fun and exciting and I've met a lot of great people," Manning said. "The visitors are just lovely people and the locals have been one happy family, I suppose you could call it, especially on that bus we go around on."

"It's been a highlight all week and it's sad that it's finished, but I think I'm required back at home so I better head home and do some work."

Harness Racing Victoria general manager—operations Vaughn Lynch said the series had been a terrific showcase of outstanding drivers from local and abroad and of the state's country clubs.

"We've seen a treat of racing," Lynch said. "I'd like to thank everyone who took part, and their lovely partners, and commend them on what a fantastic week it has been."

Manning said the series could not have been such an amazing journey without the support of many.

"I'd like to thank all the trainers who put horses in for us to drive and all the tracks that hosted," she said. "They put on a great show for us every day we traveled around and they made it most enjoyable."

International All Star Series day seven leaderboard: Kerry Manning (165.5), Dexter Dunn (158), Brett Miller (152.5), Greg Sugars (150), Chris Alford (145.5), Yannick Gingras (143.5), Jason Lee (140.5), Anthony Butt (130.5), Corey Callahan (127.5), Gavin Lang (117.5).

Overall leaderboard: Victoria (719), The World (712).

H H Tracy arrives at Walnut Hall Ltd.

The grey faced mare, H H Tracy who stirred up more than 30,000 lookers on the Standardbred Retirement Foundation's (SRF) Facebook page has arrived safely at Walnut Hall Limited.

When the SRF posted the very sad photo of the 29-year-old mare, many people stepped up with help, comments, and compassion. Of the wonderful people were Meg Jewitt and Alan Leavitt of Walnut Hall Farm in Kentucky, who among other help, offered the broken-hearted mare a place to live her remaining days, rather than ship to Canada for slaughter.

While waiting for a ride from Pennsylvania to Kentucky she seemed to have given up; she was not eating and was lethargic.

She will receive the best of care, which started the moment she arrived when Alan Leavitt and his farm manager quickly tended to her needs.

SRF is grateful for the caring people and especially Walnut Hall for giving this grand old mare dignity in her remaining days.

Coleman knows Teague's pain

Awesome, truthful, interview by George Teague (HRU, Fri., March 11). Well done and best of luck this season.

I used to have 120-130 head, was winning everything and I hated it! It sucks the life out of you working 24-7 and getting yelled at lots and stressing out when they're not all winning, etc. Now I have 24 horses, own part of all of them with awesome partners and love training and life again.

I know exactly what (Teague) is talking about. Speaking just from my experience, when I was rolling my worst horse was probably an 18-20k claimer at Mohawk racing for huge purses. I had mainly all high-end horses and never kept the bad ones. They were all making money and when they didn't, I unloaded them quickly. But keeping up to dealing with all the horses and different tracks to race and ship — entering, driver changes, dealing with a lot of staff, dealing with different owners all over the world; some understood the game, some didn't, etc.

I have all the respect in the world for Ron Burke, but I have no idea how he does it and is still sane. I did it for many years, but hated my life. What little life I had that didn't involve working non-stop left me stressing all night about horses, etc. I was always worried I was going to forget an entry, piss off an owner, be short staffed when you lose some, miss something on a horse.

I will never go that big again as life is now great! Win or lose, five claimers or stakes horses, the stress isn't worth the big barns any more and can kill a person in the long run.
