Enough Already! Harness Racing Has To Have a Real Triple Crown

There's no reason why thoroughbred racing should be so much more popular than harness racing. The sports are a lot more similar than different. Horses race. People bet on the outcome.

This will be the scene June 9 at Belmont Park when I'll Have Another tries for the Triple Crown, a scene that never happens in harness racing

But thoroughbred racing, despite many problems of its own, is infinitely more popular than harness racing in this country. It has a lot more fans, gets a lot, lot, lot more media attention and dwarfs the standardbred game when it comes to total dollars bet.

There may be many reasons for that, but one stands out: thoroughbred racing has a Triple Crown and harness racing does not.

That bears repeating: harness racing does not have a Triple Crown. It may claim to, but everyone knows that the sport's two Triple Crowns are meaningless and pointless. You cannot expect anyone to take your Triple Crowns seriously when some of the sport's biggest races are not included, races like the Cane Pace have been all over the map and calendar, trainers and owners have no incentive to try to sweep the series and a lot of fans couldn't even tell you which races make up the two series.

While so many major harness events exist in a vacuum, watched on wagered on only by the tiny slice of the public that calls itself harness fans, the thoroughbred game morphs into a major sporting event three times a year. And it becomes gigantic when a horse goes for the Triple Crown at Belmont Park, which will happen this year. There will be more than 100,000 people at Belmont June 9 to watch I'll Have Another try to sweep the Triple Crown and about 13 million more will watch the race on television. About $100 million will be wagered on the day.

(That the owner of I'll Have Another, J. Paul Reddam, started out in harness racing only to switch to thoroughbreds is painfully ironic.)

Perhaps even more importantly, those three days have a major impact on the other 362 days of the year. They make thoroughbred racing matter. They force the man on the street to pay attention to the sport. Without them, thoroughbred racing would be, well, harness racing.

The thoroughbred Triple Crown has been around for 82 years and it is an established part of the American sporting landscape, led by an iconic event in the Kentucky Derby. It's unlikely that harness racing will ever have anything like it, but it can have something. It can have a real Triple Crown, something that gets people excited, draws some attention from a mainstream media that treats harness racing like its jai alai and separates the immortal horses from the ones that are merely very good.

There are many things harness racing needs to get itself back on track, and the vast majority of them will never happen. There is never going to be a commissioner. There will never be a day when people don't cheat or when short-priced favorites don't dominate the card on the half-mile tracks. The casino outfits that now run so many tracks are never going to care about the sport.

But here's something that can actually be accomplished, and very easily. It is immensely frustrating that no one wants to step forward and fix this.

The Pacing Triple Crown is obvious. It should be the North America Cup, Meadowlands Pace and the Little Brown Jug. Other than the inclusion of the Hambletonian, a Trotting Triple Crown is a less clear cut, but not impossible to figure out.

It's time for someone to step up, lead and take charge. Maybe the USTA or Jeff Gural. Perhaps the Hambletonian Society. Perhaps all three. Establish two new Triple Crowns with the right races, form a common nominating process for the three, seek a sponsor, try to create a bonus structure, throw your marketing resources toward the events. Pick up the phone. Get it done. Now.

There were a half dozen or so terrific standardbreds in action last night across North America. They performed in front of empty grandstands and, outside of the Meadowlands, the amount bet on their races pathetic.

Meanwhile, the thoroughbreds celebrated a terrific Preakness that was carried on network television, will be written about in every major newspaper in America and was attended by more than 100,000 people.

On this day, the contrast between the two sports was never more glaring. This doesn't have to be.

Lou is Sweet in 3-YO Debut

Sweet Lou (Yankee Cruiser) was every bit as good as advertised in his 3-year-old debut last night at Pocono Downs. Driven by Dave Palone, last year's 2-year-old champion pacer, won a Pennsylvania Sire Stakes event by 3 3/4 lengths in 1:49.3

Palone elected to sit third early before gunning for the lead after three-eighths of a mile had been completed. The Ron Burke-trainee swept to the front and never had an anxious moment from there in what became a one-horse race. He paid $2.10.

Prior to the race, trainer Ron Burke said that Sweet Lou would have one more start in the sire stakes ranks and then head to Mohawk for the North America Cup.

Sweet Lou is now 11 for 13 in his career with earnings of $739,704.

American Jewel Upset at Vernon

Major Look gets the win at Vernon Downs

American Jewel (American Ideal) could do no better than second in her 2012 debut last night at Vernon Downs. The heavy favorite in the wagering in the New York sire stakes event, she finished 2 1/4 lengths behind Major Look (Art Major).

Driven by Jeff Gregory, Major Look went to the front from the gate and took an unchallenged lead through fractions of 26.3 and 55.4. American Jewel, who settled into fourth, pulled after the half with a first-over move, but was never a serious threat to the winner.

The winner went in a sparkling track record time of 1:50.

"She was pacing right through the wire," Gregory said of the winner. "She's a big strong filly and they've really done a great job with her."

This was American Jewel's first pari-mutuel start since she suffered her first career defeat last fall at the Red Mile. It was discovered afterward that she was suffering from a broken sesamoid, which required surgery.

Warrawee Needy Sick, Scratched at Georgian Downs

By Hector G. Ramos

Warrawee Needy (E Dees Cam), a top candidate for the North America Cup, missed what was expected to be his 3-year-old debut last night in the Upper Canada Cup eliminations at Georgian Downs.

Trainer Carl Jamieson explained that the horse was sick prior to the race.

"It's no big deal, he just came up sick," Jamieson said. "More than anything else, it was bad timing. I'm upset because I think this cost me a chance to make a lot of money in this race, but there's nothing I can do about it. I wasn't originally going to go in there, but now we're looking to go in the Somebeachsomewhere next."

Won The West Fourth in Big M Qualifier

By Darin Zoccali

Won The West (Western Hanover), finished fourth, beaten 5 1/4 lengths, yesterday in a Meadowlands qualifier, his first of 2012. With Dave Miller driving, he was fourth the entire trip and finished in 1:52.4. The race was won by stablemate I Trust You (Third Straight).

"Won The West went really well," Miller said. "I was very pleased with him. We didn't ask him for much, but I couldn't have expected much more from him. He'll qualify again next week."

Won The West, who has $3,928,036 in career earnings, has not had a pari-mutuel start since Sept. 3.

Where Are the "Fans"?

Did you guys see Sweet Lou? He looks ready.

Did you see that cagey Virgil Morgan? A few foundational slow qualifiers - like he did with Mr. Big -and then boom goes the dynamite! A 1:50 score, first over for Pet Rock.

Did you see Jonas's filly, Maven? First over and a romp, against a 1-9 Check Me Out!

What about American Jewel? Has San Pail lost a step, why didn't he race in the Cutler? Did you see Jeff Gural's comment about him post-race? Who's going to win in Sweden? Who is the current favorite for the North America Cup? Have some horsemen gone batty, qualifying horses in 1:50 in April? Can anyone beat a Rocknroll Hanover, like anywhere?

These are questions that readers of Harness Racing Update may have asked themselves the past few weeks. They spur debate, and for a lot of us who are harness fans, they are what the sport is about.

In thoroughbred racing, the group of fans who debate such topics are formidable, and passionate. During the run-up to the Derby, every Tom, Dick, Sue and Sally had an opinion. They were talking workouts, trainers, statistics, horses, distance limitations, and what Bob Baffert had for his post-heart ailment dinner that day. I saw countless posts on twitter, chat boards, under news stories on the DRF, or the Paulick Report, with links galore on Goatzapper.com, all about the horses, the race, and those who work with the animals.

It even happens for Grade II and Grade III races or Derby preps. The winners of the Arkansas Derby, Santa Anita Derby, Wood Memorial and Blue Grass, all trended nationwide on twitter.

When Rachel Alexandra lost her debut at 4, there were 29 pages of comments at Paceadvantage, dozens upon dozens at other chat boards, and twitter lit up like a Christmas tree.

I surveyed the landscape when Check Me Out lost this week and saw no posts about it on four chat boards. It was mentioned on twitter by DRF harness and a couple of other people, spurring little conversation.

I recently saw a post titled "who are the top three year olds going to be this season" on a chat board. There were views, but no responses. Stakes races like The Adios, the Metro, The Molson Pace, The Levy, the Breeders Crown and others can come and go with nary a mention on virtually any medium.

In harness racing, it simply isn't there. It's like we're in a vacuum.

I know what you're probably saying: Thoroughbred racing is much bigger than harness racing, so there are more fans. Sure that's true, but there's a pile of money bet on harness races, and a ton of people are involved. The sport is not dead.

Where is everyone? Is there a reason for this chasm? Recently, thoroughbred racing, through a few initiatives, have tried to spur conversation about the sport, via various mediums. The Kentucky Derby, through Churchill Downs and with the help of ad agencies, has tried to push the Derby preps at every turn. "America's Best Racing", a Jockey Club funded initiative, has done similar. It's not uncommon to see their online face, Penelope Miller, engaging new fans. Everything these organizations do is about talking prep races, stakes races, and the sport; encouraging people to talk about it, join in, and get involved.

This is, without any question, helping.

Blue Fin Labs released an analysis of Kentucky Derby mentions on social networks (infographic below). In 2012, mentions were up 633%. A day after the Derby, on twitter, people were still mentioning the race once every 52 seconds. Amazingly, an NHL hockey game, with the Flyers versus the Devils that Sunday, had fewer mentions than the Derby did, and it was live, with the Derby long over. "Earned Derby impressions", which is simply how many times a Derby tweet was seen, equaled 212 million, up from 38 million the previous year.

As we have spoken about in this column before, big stakes races in thoroughbred racing drive handle, while in our sport a 30 claimer can drive more than a $1m race on the same card. But I wonder if it has to be that way.

What if we sunk some money into an "America's Best Racing", or our Kentucky Derby, and worked it for a year or two like they have? What if we did some things that others have done to spur some excitement and get people talking our big horses, top drivers and races?

Can it help? I think it can.

A long time ago harness racing filled the grandstands at places like Roosevelt Raceway. People flocked to see Cam Fella or Bret Hanover, or Ideal Du Gazeau. I remember attending one of my first North America Cups, where I had to stand in an aisle jumping up and down to see over a barrier, so I could catch snippets of the stretch drive between Jate Lobell and Frugal Gourmet.

We'll never be like that again, but we may be able to do something by giving it one big shove. In 2012 we have to work at drawing eyeballs via many mediums. I don't think we're currently doing near enough as an industry.

Rooting Against Doug O'Neill

I, too, won't be rooting for I'll Have Another. I admit I picked the horse to win the Derby and was so proud of my "accomplishment." Then, I began reading about the various infractions of the trainer. It disgusts me for all the reasons noted by Andrew Cohen. We've got to get this issue under control...period!

Call in the FBI?

I have been a fan for 45 years and an owner for 24. Bob Carson's column should be tacked on the wall of every state racing commission and harness horsemen's association. I have believed for many years that if the FBI could get involved in just one case, it would be a tremendous deterrent. Unfortunately, resources are so tight. For example, the highly effective NJ State Police unit-which had a former horseman in its ranks-has since been disbanded.

But just one or two informants-like the Saudi spy who revealed the Yemeni bomb plot-would slow down all but the most arrogant cheaters. As Bob suggests, these "moles" may be out there now.

He Hates Chalk

The reason harness racing is losing out to the slots is because the favorites get bet down so low.....why bet them....who in their right minds is going to play a favorite that's 1-9, 2 to 5, 3-5? Who wants to put up 2 bucks across on them just to win 80 or 90 cents? It's a no brainer.

Owners Need To Support Big Races

Obviously half-mile track racing is out of favor, and I realize that the small track in London is especially challenging for certain horses, but that's no excuse for the faint support the $300,000 Molson Pace is getting, particularly on the part of Canadian owners and horsemen.

There are two eliminations for the Molson tonight; one has five entries and the other six. Of those eleven starters, only four are Canadian owned, and among those, only Up

The Credit—who is making his seasonal debut—would draw any attention from the public. If not for the three Burke horses, Foiled, Atochia and Clear Vision, the race would be a catastrophe. As it is, Foiled, Atochia and WTW have eaten up most of the purse money over the last couple of years. The race has turned into a Burke Brigade charity event, and they deserve it just for showing up.

Only three of the eight starters in last year's final were Canadian owned. At a time when the industry is fighting for survival in Ontario, you'd think this race would garner more support in that area. Half of the thirty-two horses nominated for this year's edition are Canadian owned, and the connections of these horses were aware of the configuration of the Western Fair track when they sent their money in, so where are they? Sure, some are simply unable to compete for one reason or another, but three are racing at Mohawk the day after the Molson eliminations. Would it surprise anyone if the sponsor decided their money could be better spent elsewhere?

Looking at another $300,000 race, the Rooney at Yonkers, one has to wonder at what point management will pull the plug on that one. Last year Peelers and her two entry mates, Line Officer and Rollwithitharry, took the first three places in front of Avenue Hanover, Arockin Hanover and Vincent Fra. There were four betting interests and win betting only. Are the dates the problem? What about the steep admission price?

This year the Rooney has drawn nine nominees, and two of those colts are also eligible to the SBSW, which draws most of the interest during that time frame. While three of the colts, Bolt The Duer, HurriKane King Cole and Pet Rock are apparently better at this point in their careers than the colts that faced Peelers, you need to attract a pool of more than nine for a $300,000 race. One nominee went nowhere in the Bobby Weiss, another won in the lower level NYSS Excelsior series, and three more have losing efforts in the NYSS. Another nominee has a third against nw3 at the Meadowlands. This isn't a pack of world-beaters to begin with, and what happens if the connections of three or four of them choose not to enter?

The eliminations are scheduled for May 26: I have a sneaking suspicion they won't need to whittle down the field. The final is on June 2, the same day as the SBSW. A lot of folks simply want no part of a half, but as is the case with the Molson, the level of apathy greeting the Rooney may result in it simply going away.

The same can be said of the Quillen, where the purse has been reduced this year, and the Battle of Lake Erie, which drew twenty nominees, including the ever-present Foiled Again and one too many marginal players.

Some favor bulldozing all the half-mile tracks. The problem is that there is no money or appetite for building new race-tracks, so folks should start showing more support for the few marquee events left on the twice-arounds. Our world is shrinking as it is. We shouldn't be helping it along.

River Shark (Brian Sears, $14.60) made it two in a row after a game first over score, winning by a neck in 1:50. Meirs Hanover (Yannick Gingras) fired off the gate to gain early command, set the fractions for as long as he could, met up with River Shark turning for home, battled it out down to the wire but was nailed late after a gutsy try. We Will See (Ron Pierce) who was making his seasonal debut came away in seventh, followed third over as time ran out, angled wide for the drive and finished well (26.2 last quarter) for third but it was way too late.

Time To Roll (Ron Pierce, $6.60) retook past the quarter, stole the second quarter (29.3) while rolling along unchallenged and sprinted home to win his seasonal debut by 2-3/4 lengths in 1:50.4. Pet Rock (Brian Sears) the 1-2 favorite and last week's winner tucked fourth on the rail turn one, pulled uncovered through a slow pace and never got close to pose a threat while finishing second with a 26.1 last quarter. Hurrikane Kingcole (Gingras) gapped the favorite's cover, got urged on and rallied up for third with a 25.4 last quarter in his seasonal debut.

Jamie Sue (Tim Tetrick, $2.20) and Brownsville Bomber (Jimmy Whittemore, $6.30) finished in a dead heat for first. Jamie Sue grinded first over, kept on plugging away and surged down the stretch to take over but had company as Brownsville Bomber was on his back second over. That rival took aim and surged as well but the photo could not separate the two. It was Jamie Sue's fifth win (2nd straight) in 11 starts this year while Brownsville Bomber won her second consecutive in 3 starts. Bettor B Lucky (Jim Morrill Jr) followed third over behind the top two and closed well down the stretch for third.
