What jet lag?

Resolve dominated the $200,000 Cutler Memorial Friday at the Meadowlands in his first North American start since traveling to Sweden and back to contest the Elitlopp.

Resolve (Ake Svanstedt) handily winning the $200,000 Arthur Cutler Memorial Friday at the Meadowlands.

Displaying no ill effects after traveling to Europe and back and being away from the races for almost a month, Resolve powered down the road to an easy one-length win in the $200,000 Arthur J. Cutler Memorial Final for trotters Friday (June 24) at the Meadowlands.

The winner's last start came in the May 29 Elitlopp at Solvalla (Sweden) when the five-year-old son of Muscle Hill—Anikawiesahalee finished second to U.S.-bred Nuncio.

"The horse was very good," said winning trainer/driver Ake Svanstedt. "He came back home (from Sweden) and it took him two weeks to get back to normal."

Too bad for his foes.

2016 YEARLING SALE: NOV. 7-9 | MIXED SALE: NOV. 10-11

The last time Resolve raced in North America was May 8 at the Meadowlands when he was romping to victory in the inaugural $150,000 Mack Lobell Elitlopp Playoff before trotting inside a number of pylons and being set back by the judges. Still, his performance was impressive enough for Elitlopp officials to offer him an invitation to the famed Swedish trotting race.

The even-money favorite in the Cutler, Resolve was sent away fast from post seven and had the lead at the quarter pole in :27.1.

Svanstedt did a masterful job of rating the second fraction, which was timed in a sleepy :30 as they hit the half in :57.1. Obrigado, the 2-1 second choice fresh off wins in the Maxie Lee and Hill Memorial, vacated the four hole at the seven-sixteenths and grinded his way into contention at three-quarters, which went in 1:25.4.

Then Svanstedt hit the gas and Resolve responded with a final quarter of :26.3, leaving Obrigado behind while opening up a safe lead. Flanagan Memory, who went a third-over trip, closed well through the stretch to end up a no-threat second. Obrigado held third. Early-season sensation JL Cruze was fourth.

Resolve trotted the mile in 1:52.2 and paid $4.20 to win for owner Hans G Enggren.

The victory pushed Resolve over $1 million in career earnings in North America to go with the more than $150,000 he's earned in Europe.

It was the 19th edition of the Arthur Cutler Memorial, named for the famed New York restaurateur who used to own horses with Meadowlands owner Jeff Gural before Gural owned the track.

In 1997, Cutler died in his sleep of a heart attack at age 53. About three weeks later, a two-year-old trotting filly Cutler owned with Gural and Art Geiger named Cyclone Annie pulled off a 9-1 upset in a $100,000 New Jersey Sires Stakes final at the Meadowlands. It was the only race Cyclone Annie ever won. Many of Cutler's family and friends were at the race that night. "That was such a weird moment because everybody was standing there crying. Everybody was upset, but happy. It was just a very powerful moment," Geiger said a few years ago in a feature story in The Canadian Sportsman. "From that moment on, (Cutler's) wife, Alice, and Jeff decided to make a race for Arty at the Meadowlands, which is the Arthur Cutler. It was a very, very poignant moment in all of our lives."

Gural helped fund the race. Nearly two decades years later, it's an annual can't-miss event for Gural, many friends and the Cutler family.

Consensus Builder

Dan Gall, the new president and CEO of Standardbred Canada said one of his strengths is building relationships. It's a skill he plans to use to extensively consult the membership about the future of the organization.

by Dave Briggs

Dave Briggs

Dan Gall (in the grandstand at The Raceway at The Western Fair District), is leaving his position as the general manager of the OLG's slot hall at Western Fair to become the president and CEO of Standardbred Canada.

Dan Gall said the first order of business when he officially becomes the president and chief executive officer of Standardbred Canada on July 18 is to consult the membership and find out where it thinks the organization should be heading.

Standardbred Canada has faced declining membership and financial challenges in recent years and is heavily involved in a number of areas beyond its core mandate as harness racing's registrar and information keeper in Canada – horses sales, marketing, media, etc.

Gall said Thursday, "everything needs to be reviewed.

"Some of the stakes holders I've already spoken to have intimated to me that we, perhaps, have to reset what we're doing," he said. "We have to, perhaps redefine what we're doing. Frankly, I believe that's why I was selected for the job, because I'm great at relationship building. I love leading teams and when we get all the facts on the table we can make some hard decisions about what the direction is going to be. But I have to underline it by saying that it's going to be the customers that need to drive that vision forward for us. I won't be able to determine what that vision is until I have an idea from our customers."

The day Gall takes his post will mark the first time in a full year and a day that Standardbred Canada has had a CEO. John Gallinger, the low-profile previous president and CEO, resigned July 17, 2015.

Gall comes to Standardbred Canada after 17 years with the Ontario Lottery and Gaming corporation (OLG) as a manager of seven different slot machine parlors in the province.

"I opened up the Clinton property and then moved up and down the highway 401 over the past 17 years and operated the biggest racino in the province at Woodbine. I also spent some time in Hiawatha, Kawartha in Peterborough."

He is leaving his position as the general manager of the OLG's slot operation at The Western Fair District in London to take the job with Standardbred Canada.

Prior to working for the OLG, Gall worked in radio for some 20 years – and has the broadcasting voice to prove it.

Gall was born in Tillsonburg, ON and occasionally went as a boy with his family to Woodstock Raceway and then Kawartha Downs when the family moved to Peterborough.

"It was a family thing we would do occasionally. It was never something that we did all the time. That was my first introduction," Gall said. "But really it was when I started working with the OLG then I became very aware of the industry."

Gall said the fact his first job with the OLG came at Clinton Raceway gave him an invaluable education about horse racing courtesy of track general manager Ian Fleming.

"I learned so much so quickly through Ian, not only about the industry, but more importantly, the passion, the energy, the commitment of the people that are working in the horse racing industry. It's unbelievable.

"Very early on in Clinton, Ian and I organized a meeting of industry leaders both in the racetrack and in OLG to put together the very first provincial promotion called See How The Other Half Wins. It was an opportunity to display what OLG's product was to the race fans and the race fans' product to our customers," said Gall, who still lives in the Clinton area in the Lake Huron resort town of Bayfield.

Though some may consider Gall an outsider that worked for the same OLG that cancelled the Slots at Racetracks Program (SARP) in 2013 causing upheaval in Ontario's horse racing industry, he said he thinks he was hired because he has the skills to bring the industry together.

"I know it's been a rough ride in the last few years. It's been a little upheaval in certain areas. However, I think first and foremost, is going and understanding and listening to what our members are saying and what their expectations are for Standardbred Canada. What their wants and needs are and the direction in which they would like to take the organization. Talking to our industry members, our racing fans, is, I think, critical to understanding the great picture," Gall said.

"The good news from Standardbred Canada's perspective and my perspective is we've got a great team that is committed to this sport and committed to the industry. I believe we have to have a balance of input from our members to ensure we're delivering on their expectations."

Gall has already been working the phones and talking to stakeholders. He thinks a trip to western Canada will come early in his tenure and hopes to go to the east coast, as well, to consult with the membership.

"I do need to go into the head office and look at our team, talk to them, tap into their energies and their insights of where we're going to go," he said. "So, it will evolve with regards to the schedule, but I do believe that first year is going to be critical in getting out and reaching out to the industry and listening to where we should be driving our business."

He said he also wants to develop a strong working relationship with the United States Trotting Association.

"Definitely, we need to build the relations. We need to work together," he said. "The way I look at it, Standardbred Canada needs to be the voice of the industry in Canada. The industry is the breeders, the owners, the drivers, the trainers. They're the ones that should be having the voice. If I can harness that and speak on their behalf of the direction, that's the direction that we need to go."

MacDonald, Henry take Ontario; advance to Canadian driving championship

by Jeff Porchak / Standardbred Canada

Driver James MacDonald had the early winning momentum while Trevor Henry finished strong to top the point standings in the Ontario Regional Driving Championship and advance to the National Driving Championship.

Grand River Raceway in Elora, ON played host to the nine-race Ontario regional event on Friday night (June 24) and MacDonald was the point leader from start to finish. The 30-year-old resident of Guelph, ON opened the competition with a victory in the first race aboard Twin B Amour ($12.50) and also earned wins with Master Smile ($10) in the third leg and Little Whiskey Gal ($6.30) in the sixth leg. A pair of runner-up efforts in two other legs also padded his point total and he ended the competition with 78 points.

"I'm pretty pumped," said MacDonald. "It's an honor just to be invited to race with these guys. They're a great bunch of drivers and any one of us could have won with the right card, the right horses, so I'm pretty happy to be the victor."

"And I'm really happy Jody didn't win again," joked MacDonald, referring to five-time Canadian rep and two-time world driving champion Jody Jamieson, who had moved into a two-way tie for second-place with Alfie Carroll before Henry began his late winning crusade.

Henry ranked eighth for points before earning back-to-back victories in the final two legs with Topanga Canyon ($4.60) and Flexie ($7.10). Those victories propelled him to second-place in the standings to edge out Jamieson by one point (60-59).

The 45-year-old reinsman from Arthur, ON, who represented Canada at the 2013 World Driving Championship in France, said he was "ecstatic" to compete in the National Driving Championship again.

The Atlantic Regional Driving Championship will be held next at Red Shores Racetrack and Casino at Charlottetown Driving Park on Saturday (June 25), followed by the Western Regional at Century Downs Racetrack and Casino near Calgary on Sunday (June 26). The Quebec/Eastern Ontario Regional will be hosted by Hippodrome 3R on July 12.

The top two point-earners from each of the four regional competitions will advance to the National Driving Championship on Oct. 14 at The Raceway at Western Fair District in London, ON. The winner of the National Driving Championship will represent Canada in the 2017 World Driving Championship, to be held in Canada.

First Class

Keep an eye out for the progeny of a number of first-crop and relocated stallions as they hit a racetrack near year you.

by Joe Fitzgerald

Michael Lisa

Chapter Seven (Tim Tetrick) is one of the top stallions with first-crop progeny hitting the racetrack this summer.

The freshman class is prepping for Grand Circuit and Sires Stakes action at tracks all over North America. And while there is no Muscle Hill or Somebeachsomewhere among the purveyors of first-crop trotters and pacers, there are some solid prospects that bear watching. In addition to that, there are several relocated stallions whose first crops in their new locations will come online in 2016.

Chapter Seven, world champion and 2012 Trotter of the Year, is the highest profile first-crop stallion. The diminutive son of the ill-fated Windsong's Legacy, a Triple Crown winner and Hall of Fame Immortal, stands in New York for $7,500. Blue Chip paid $500,000 for a 20per cent stake in him, giving him a valuation of $2.5 million. He set a 1:50.1 world record at four and earned almost $2 million.

Chapter Seven bred 112 mares in 2013, resulting in the 84 registered foals that make up this year's crop. Paternal brother Lucky Chucky is about to send his third crop to the track, and while Dog Gone Lucky and Non Stick have impressed, the returns have not been favorable thus far. Let's hope Chapter Seven gets off to a better start in the New York Sires Stakes (NYSS). To this point they are showing plenty of speed in baby races.

Archangel made a halting start to his breeding career in 2013. He was granted a waiver from the Gural Rule for a slight breathing issue and was advertised for a $4,000 fee in New York. He won a break-plagued Yonkers Trot in world record time, as well as the Empire Breeders Classic, and been successful in the NYSS, earning about $900,000. A solid colt career, but nothing to take your breath away and the breeders acted accordingly, sending only 43 mares his way. This resulted in the 30 registered foals being introduced in 2016. Archangel's daddy, Credit Winner, is still searching for a son who will extend him. Crazyed, Chocolatier and Here Comes Herbie are currently his most prominent sire credits. Archangel's dam, Michelle's Angel, won the 2007 Casual Breeze and his granddam Almost An Angel was the queen of her 2YO division in 1991.

Archangel returned to the track in 2014 where he only won two races, but one of them was a world record 1:50 in a Cashman elimination. This time he was retired to Ontario where he was made to feel wanted, drawing 108 mares. We'll see how that small first crop makes out in the States this year.

Unlike his paternal brother Archangel, Dejambro was very popular in Ohio from day one. He bred 138 mares in each of his first two years there and 100 last year. There are 105 freshmen in this year's crop, 61 of them colts. He was more successful than Archangel was in the NYSS at two as he won six legs and the final. Dejarmbro subsequently broke stride as the favorite in the Breeders Crown. At three, his claim to fame was a dominant win in the Earl Beal where he matched the world record for his class.

Big Rigs, an Andover Hall eight-year-old out of 2002 O'Brien winner Filly At Bigs, has had fertility issues. He bred 58 mares in Ohio in 2013, but only got 10 registered foals from those pairings. In 2014, he only bred 19 mares and got a dozen foals from that; and last year the number bred dropped to eight. His fee dropped $1,000 from last year to this when he was relocated within Ohio.

The first crops in new locations of stallions that were moved for one reason or another obviously don't carry the same air of mystery as the former group, but sometimes a step down in sire stakes affiliation can bring new life to a stallion.

Art Official, who conquered Somebeachsomewhere in the Meadowlands Pace, has been no match for that one in the Pennsylvania Sire Stakes. That fact is reflected in his bookings, which dropped from 135 to 75 to 47 between 2010 and 2012. He took up residence in Ohio in 2013 and breeders with more modest expectations than the Keystone crowd sent 108 mares to him, resulting in the 67 two-year-olds that will hit the Ohio Sire Stakes this year. The fact that his fee dropped from $7,000 to $5,000 when he arrived helped his cause. That fee has since decreased to $3,000 as his popularity has waned; he bred 72 mares in 2014 and 47 last year. The Ohio Sires Stakes is much easier to navigate than the PASS; we'll see if Art Official can come alive in that more laid back Midwestern environment.

Crazed, the Credit Winner stallion that gave us JL Cruze and Crazy Wow, stood in New York for four years before being moved to Pennsylvania in 2013. That crop of 69, derived from 108 bookings, will be eligible to the PASS this year.

Crazed stayed two years in the Keystone State before returning to New York in 2015. The trotting division of the Pennsylvania Sires Stakes is very competitive, with the likes of Cantab Hall, Donato Hanover and Andover Hall, and with Muscle Hill joining the fray with a freshman crop next year. Tirade Hanover, Gural Hanover Crazy Wow and Crazy About Pat have flourished in the NYSS, but New York ain't Pennsylvania.

Bettor's Delight, arguably the most productive and consistent pacing sire on the planet, was relocated to Ontario after 10 years in New York to make room for his little brother, Roll With Joe. His single 2015 crop in Ontario produced the likes of L A Delight and Betting Line. This year's crop of freshmen, and next as well, will compete in the Pennsylvania program. He bred 168 and 169 mares in 2013 and 2014 in PA, resulting in 126 and 115 registered foals. So the money machine will surely make his presence felt in that restricted program as well as on the Grand Circuit trail this year.

McArdle, who stood with modest success in Pennsylvania for $5000 until 2012, moved to Ohio with a $4,000 fee in 2013. His first Buckeye crop will emerge this year. He started his sire career in New Jersey in 2004. After two years there he moved to Pennsylvania for a seven-year stretch. McArdle has been very popular in Ohio with bookings of 176, 105 and 113 mares. There are 97 two-year-olds in his coming out crop. One More Laugh, McWicked and Big McDeal are three of his top offspring. He should do very well in a smaller pond like Ohio.

After standing seven seasons in New Jersey, Rocknroll Hanover was moved across the border to Pennsylvania in 2013. It was there that he died in March of that year. The tricks of the trade allowed 93 mares to be bred to him, resulting in 44 registered foals. They will be Pennsylvania eligible this year.

Fifteen-year-old Ponder, who started his sire career in Pennsylvania in 2007, is back there and will introduce his first Keystone crop this year. He was relocated to Kentucky in 2008 and spent three years as the dominant stallion in their limited sire stakes program, before heading north to Ontario for a two-year residency. Numbers have always been the issue for the sire of Thinking Out Loud and Bolt The Duer. He bred 99 mares in 2007, but has failed to top 76 in the ensuing eight years. He averaged 37 registered foals per year from his first eight crops. Those numbers have improved at Diamond Creek Farm in Pennsylvania. There are 24 colts and 20 fillies in this year's crop of PA two-year-olds.

Deweycheatumnhowe was scheduled to remain in Ontario in 2013, but he was moved to New York at the last minute after the Slots at Racetracks Program was cancelled. He stood two years in Kentucky before moving to Ontario for three years. And while he's never been mistaken for a Grand Circuit stallion, Dewey has done very well in the Ontario Sire Stakes program. In fact, he bred 134 mares his last year in that province. His fee has gradually dropped over the years from $20,000 to the current $6,000. Now that some stability has been built into the OSS program it's hard to see what he gains from the switch. His current crop of freshmen numbers 33 colts and 31 fillies.

RMTC task force to study Glaucine

by Joe Faraldo

The New York State Gaming Commission has received at least 35 written reports from its own highly-regarded testing laboratory regarding positive tests for Glaucine at New York State tracks. Other jurisdictions have reported similar positives. Not only hasn't the Gaming Commission taken any action to call for the return of purse money, much less done anything as required by its regulations; now the Commission has apparently decided that there is some reason to have the Racing Medication and Testing Consortium (RMTC) conduct "research" on Glaucine. The drug is manufactured, and generally available, outside the United States. This has been done despite the (New York) Gaming Commission's research lab coming to its own conclusions; something in the past always deemed more than satisfactory.

Meanwhile, with no action taken, positive tests continue to be reported in New York and other jurisdictions. Presumptively, RMTC will issue a report about this drug at some point in time, but more time will obviously pass. One has to wonder why this unprecedented action is being done via RMTC, and what data is being shared or withheld from RMTC?

RMTC was formed with the intent of developing a Controlled Therapeutic Medication Schedule (CTMS) to achieve uniformity in the use of therapeutic medications in race horses, while preventing medications and drugs from unduly influencing the outcome of races. The RMTC does not have a very good track record achieving its goals, and its scientific work in establishing thresholds has often left much to be desired. Dr. Scott Palmer, the New York Gaming Commission's Equine Medical Director who sits on the newly announced Task Force, certainly knows that to be the case.

In the past, RMTC sought to provide a guideline to the New York Gaming Commission to adopt for all breeds for Flunixin (Banamine) and for Clenbuterol for harness horses. The recommendations were not only contrary to some of RMTC's own scientific guidelines; its research, such as it is, remains hidden under a "confidentiality" agreement which prevents RMTC's members from divulging even the research they reviewed, much less the scientific basis for their determinations of those thresholds. It is, of course, intuitively obvious that undisclosed, unpublished research can never fail to pass peer review. Had the New York State Gaming Commission adopted those RMTC thresholds, New York horsemen would have suffered false positives, because the RMTC guidelines were, in point of scientific fact, erroneous, and later corrected.

By way of example, in 2013, RMTC adopted a threshold for Xylazine (Rompun) that was too low. That reportedly resulted in the disqualification and penalization of over thirty (30) horses and trainers. In 2016, after those horsemen were penalized, RMTC increased the threshold 20 times higher; that did little good for those Florida horsemen who saw a spike in drug positives. Florida was one of twenty states adopting the much heralded National Uniform Medication Program. Uniform rule recommendations not based upon scientific fact present a horrible scenario for individual horsemen, as well as for the industry. What in God's name was the basis for those RMTC recommendations in the first instance? Just this year, two more threshold changes occurred; one for the analgesic detomidine, the other for omeprazole (ulcer medicine). The originally published RMTC thresholds were apparently not based on actual science at all, tantamount to perhaps being pulled out of a hat and conveniently protected under the confidentiality agreement.

The confidentiality agreement shielded RMTC from scientific scrutiny, the kind to which the New York State Gaming Commission laboratory is subjected, as the industry bears witness to in contested cases where all underlying data is subject to legal and scientific challenge. RMTC, once receiving financial support from the USTA, saw that support come to an abrupt halt because it ignored the harness industry and the apparent failings discovered in push back by the SOA of NY. Thankfully, due to that aggressive push back, the New York State Gaming Commission did not follow the RMTC's recommendations for Banamine and Clenbuterol thresholds. Thus, potentially devastating catastrophes for horsemen as a result of ill-conceived guidelines were avoided in New York. The Florida thoroughbred horsemen did not fare as well, and today the HBPA begs to undo the RMTC uniform rule guidelines.

Later, RMTC issued a threshold level for Cobalt, which also seemed to be out of touch with actual research being conducted on the drug. Research principally funded by the USTA conducted by Dr. George Maylin, the New York State Gaming Commission's equine pharmacologist, as well as renowned researchers Dr. Karen Malinowski and Dr. Kenneth McKeever of the Equine Science Center at Rutgers University, also exhibited clear problems with RMTC's conclusions and recommendation in this area.

After the problematic RMTC litany listed, one would think that Dr. Palmer, the Equine Medical Director, himself not a research scientist, would know better than to look to RMTC for assistance of any kind on the reported Glaucine positives in New York. This is especially so, since the New York State Gaming Commission's lab should have, and did give consideration to possible environmental contamination in the levels reported to be found in both blood and urine. It is reported that the New York lab conducted tests to determine just how much a horse would need to eat of its own bedding to hit the levels allegedly found. Astoundingly, in order to achieve these levels, it was scientifically determined that anywhere from 3 to 10 quarts of shavings would need to be ingested during the relevant time frame.

Getting back to the basic problem with the RMTC selection, it should be noted that RMTC also developed an accreditation process for equine drug testing laboratories. Accreditation costs states money in order to meet the accreditation protocols; money that could have been better spent on research on drugs that heretofore, and still today, go undetected. Interestingly, when the Indiana Horse Racing Commission sent "audit samples" to a second lab for analysis, the second lab found several "positive tests" which were missed by RMTC's accredited Truesdail Laboratories, Inc.

So what is the reason to have the RMTC Task Force study Glaucine? One stated reason is to consider where to assign Glaucine in the system of drug classification. Well, if it is a bronchial dilator like Albuterol, Clenbuterol, Afrin or Fenspiride, which even RMTC calls threats to the integrity of racing, one would not need great intuitive powers to group the drug in the same class. One has to wonder if the New York State Gaming Commission's Equine Medical Director, Dr. Palmer, is searching for someone, anyone, to provide the Gaming Commission with some rationale for its departure from the normal process of, after the horse test clean, return of the purse for redistribution and affording the trainer the opportunity to present facts proving contamination, if indeed that is the case. The industry has now been waiting the six (6) months someone predicted this would take and the latter two items remain open in spite of New York State Gaming Commission regulations.

Therefore, one is prompted to ask if something else is going on here? Is it the pleading to New York regulators from an interested party when these positives first surfaced, telling them he was getting "crucified in the press"? Is it the fact that levels as high as 11 ng/ml, coupled with the high number of positives, is just too much for the industry to swallow? With positives allegedly found in many places now, the self-serving mantra that some tracks claim, that of being the pinnacles of integrity, become indelibly tarnished. In New York, no substance, other than listed permissive medications, are allowed to be present in a horse's system within seven (7) days of racing. Glaucine has a half-life of only six-to-eight hours and is not a listed substance. What will the marriage of RMTC and Glaucine produce? What is the expected gestation period; six, nine or 12 months? Will confidentiality be waived?

It should be remembered that an industry that rightfully clamors for the need to detect previously unknown and undetectable substances, whose origins are generally in foreign countries as Fenspiride and Clenbuterol were years ago, must acknowledge that it still wants new substances detected. If not, we are wasting a great deal of time and effort for naught.

In sum, there is no "cover" for lack of integrity, and while horsemen do push the envelope as far as they can sometimes, neither regulators nor scientists should demonstrate anything less than the responsibility accorded the roles in which they are vested. Often, however, they seem to have difficulties to getting out of their own way. The New York reported Cobalt positives, originally meted-out as career-ending fines and suspensions, were negotiated out to much lesser penalties, but that was not reported.

The multitude of horsemen in New York and elsewhere will continue to watch this Glaucine saga quite closely, and with much scrutiny being given to the process itself, to determine if the motive is genuine, or ulterior. The prime open question here is: with RMTC's questionable track record and its confidentiality requirement, which doesn't lend itself to any scientific scrutiny, what is the exercise trying to achieve?

Hopefully, for the good of this game, warts and all, the RMTC group assembled, was not cherry picked for some questionable purpose. The industry deserves the facts based upon solid, verifiable scientifically data for the good of all, and especially for the good of the game itself.

Two divisions of NYSS Hugh Grant Pace

Friday night Yonkers welcomed the Empire's glamour division in the $167,874 New York Sire Stakes (NYSS) Hugh Grant Pace for three-year-old colts and geldings in a pair of $83,937 divisions.

Roll Away Joe (Matt Kakaley, $10.40), won the first division from post three (in one notch after a scratch) after stalking pace-setting Fine Diamond (George Brennan) through intervals of :28.2, :58 and 1:26.1. Joe then ducked inside, whipping Fine Diamond by three-quarters of a length in 1:53.4, with Art Rooney Pace winner Missile J (Jim Morrill Jr.) a belated third as the 3-5 favorite, unable to reach from off the pace.

Roll Away Joe, a Roll with Joe—Chatelaine gelding co-owned by Steve Demeter, Thomas Lazarro and Howard Taylor and trained by Tracy Brainard, is now one-for-nine this season. The exacta paid $30.40, with the triple returning $72.

"He was really good and the trip worked out perfectly," Kakaley said.

Friday's second NYSS grouping had Brennan and pole-sitting Artmagic ($7.60) pop pocket before the half, widen the advantage down the backside and hang on for dear life.

Concur (Brent Holland) made the lead before a :28.3 opening quarter-mile, then Artmagic took it away coming to the :58.2 intermission. He had a couple of lengths in and out of a 1:26.1 three-quarters and enjoyed an open lead into the lane.

The hooves were getting heavy late in the game, but Artmagic found the end zone when he needed it. He held off a long-uncovered, just-over-even-money fave Craftship (Scott Zeron) by a neck 1:55.1, with Autotune Hanover (Morrill Jr.) third.

The slogging final quarter tightened up the ranks, with the five cashers separated by just a length at the line and the entire octet by just two-and-a-half lengths.

For second choice Artmagic, an Art Major—Sammy's Magic Girl gelding trained by Trond Smedshammer for Purple Haze Stables, it was his first win in five seasonal starts. The exacta paid $22.20, the triple returned $53 and the superfecta (Bottom Deals [Brian Sears]) paid $682.

"It wasn't pretty, but we got the job done," Brennan said.

Impressive efforts in Town Pro Series opener

Lindys Nightmare and Collective Wisdom captured first round divisions of the Town Pro Series Friday night (June 24) at Mohawk Racetrack.

The Town Pro Series has been used as a launching pad by lightly raced three-year-old pacing fillies over the years and after Friday's first leg it appears the 2016 edition will continue that tradition.

Lindys Nightmare turned in a sizzling 1:50.4 performance to capture the first division.

The Frank Antonacci trainee took over the lead in the second-quarter for driver Rick Zeron and reached the half in :56.1. Lindys Nightmare paced her third-quarter in :27.4 and still had plenty of energy left for the stretch drive.

The 3-2 favorite rocketed home in :26.4 to draw away from her five rivals to score a four-and-three-quarter length victory in a career-best 1:50.4.

Twenty Three Red came from fifth at the three-quarter pole to grab second, while Southwind Tango, who followed Lindys Nightmare into the stretch, finished third.

A daughter of Western Terror—Lindys Bandita, Lindys Nightmare was making just her fourth career start Friday. The Antonacci trainee was unraced at two, made a break in her career debut on May 1, but now has three consecutive victories.

Owned by Lindy Farms of Connecticut, Lindys Nightmare has now earned $22,000 for her connections. She paid $5.10 to win.

Collective Wisdom enjoyed a pocket trip and pounced in the lane to score a 1:52 victory in the second division.

Rocknroll Vision, the 4-5 favorite, went to the front and led the field of the five by the opening-quarter in :27. The public's choice went unchallenged through fractions of :56 and 1:24.

In the stretch, Collective Wisdom was angled off the back of Rocknroll Vision by driver Jonathan Drury and the 7-2 second choice powered by to win by three-quarters of a length in 1:52. Queen Ideal finished third.

A daughter of American Ideal—Michelle's Destiny, Collective Wisdom now has two wins in five starts this season after going winless in four outings at two. The Richard Moreau trainee has now banked $22,900 this season for her 1187422 Ontario Inc. ownership group.

Collective Wisdom paid $9.60 to win.

In order to be eligible to the Town Pro Series, the three-year-old pacing fillies had to be non-winners of $30,000 lifetime as of March 31, 2016.

The second round of the Town Pro will take place next Friday (July 1).

Layla's day at Gaitway

There were a number of stirring performances this week when Gaitway Farm held its final round of June qualifiers, but the most inspiring had nothing to do with any of the horses that went onto the racetrack.

Ken Weingartner

Layla Mosley and her lemonade stand at Gaitway.

The day belonged to Layla Mosley.

Layla, the five-year-old granddaughter of Delaware-based trainer Joe Hundertpfund Jr., is battling a rare type of bone cancer, Ewing's Sarcoma. But she was on hand Monday (June 20) at Gaitway Farm in New Jersey, handing out lemonade to fans on a warm morning, to help raise money for the Alex's Lemonade Stand Foundation and childhood cancer research.

In addition, Monday was the final day of a 50-50 raffle at Gaitway to benefit Layla and her parents, Brenda and Keith. The fundraiser netted more than $2,600.

The help of all the horsemen has been unbelievable," Hundertpfund said. "Everywhere. All the horsemen have been so good to us. It's been helping because my son-in-law has been out of work (taking unpaid leave to be with Layla) and this is going to be an ongoing battle."

Layla was diagnosed with her cancer in early February and underwent months of chemotherapy before having surgery just several weeks ago at The Children's Hospital of Philadelphia to remove a tumor and parts of three ribs.

"The tumor started in her ribs and metastasized to her lungs and eventually worked its way out of her back," Hundertpfund said. "The chemo made the tumor shrink to the point where they were able to take it out. Fortunately the chemo worked so well there was no sign of any tumors in her lungs; they did a biopsy and it came back cancer free.

"Now it's three more months of chemotherapy, a little bit of radiation, and then just hope for the best."

Layla's attitude during her fight has inspired all those around her. Layla's favorite response whenever anyone asks about her condition is, "No biggie." Following her recent surgery, she called Hundertpfund and his wife Doreen via FaceTime and sang a song about "kicking cancer's butt."

"She's so resilient," Hundertpfund said. "She always has a positive outlook. She doesn't feel sorry for herself one bit, which I think really helps."

MESSAGE TO OUR READERS

When we brought HRU back in January, we asked for your support both as readers and advertisers. We have been overwhelmed with the response so far on both ends, but still need your help to make HRU viable and sustainable. Here are three ways you can help—and they're all free:

1. If you haven't already, please subscribe to receive HRU and encourage anyone you know who might like HRU to do the same. It's quick and easy and, again, free!
2. Support the advertisers that support us. Click on their ads and check out their websites. Most ads are linked to their sites. Tell them, or us, if you like one of their ads and why. The advertisers keep HRU free for readers.
3. Write more letters. One of the most popular features of HRU is Sunday's Feedback section. We want to hear from you!

THANKS from the new HRU Team!
