

Hockey and Horses are Brad Maxwell's Life By Perry Lefko

Given that he's only been training back full time for four years after leaving the sport to pursue a career as an assistant coach in the Ontario Hockey League, trainer Brad Maxwell is doing quite well.

Beastmaster, to name a few of the good ones he had before exiting harness racing to concentrate on coaching, has a modest stable of nine horses. Among them is two-year-old pacing colt sensation Control The Moment, who increased his career record to seven wins in as many starts and upped his career earnings to $440,687 with an authoritative outing in the $685,000 Metro Pace last Saturday at Mohawk Racetrack.

The son of Well Said won by 2 1/4 lengths in a time of 1:49 4/5, which was only two-fifths off the stakes record. He won with a three-wide move up the backstretch under the direction of driver Randy Waples, who was full of praise for the horse afterward. Control The Moment is entered Saturday night at Mohawk to race in a division of the Champlain Stakes. Maxwell said the colt will race in Lexington after that and then will return home for the Breeders Crown at Woodbine Racetrack.

Maxwell's evolution from training horses to coaching hockey players began when his sons, Brandon and Ryan, were playing minor hockey. Maxwell, a former Junior A player with the Kitchener Rangers, didn't like the coaching his sons were receiving.

"I would bitch about coaches and stuff the whole time, and my wife said 'instead of bitching, why don't you do something about it?' Why don't you just give somebody a hand?' So I did," Maxwell told Harness Racing Update.

He became a coach of note with the Cambridge Hawks Minor Midget Triple A team, which had eight members selected in the 2007 Ontario Hockey League Draft, including defenceman Ryan Ellis, taken second overall. Ellis developed into a first-round draft pick of the Nashville Predators. Brandon, a goalie, was also on the team and in later years was a sixth-round draft pick of the Colorado Avalanche. He now plays in Czechoslovakia.

Maxwell's work caught the attention of Dave Barr, head coach of the Guelph Storm, and he was offered a job as an assistant coach for the 2007-08 season. Maxwell was training horses at the time, including Windsong Espoir, who won nine of 10 races as a juvenile and almost $700,000 in 2007, and Pure Ivory, who won more than $1.4 million in her career.

Faced with the decision of continuing to train or leave to take a full-time job as an assistant with Guelph - some of his clients didn't like him doing both - he opted to exit the horse racing industry. He turned his horses over to his son Ryan during the 2008 season and gradually divested himself of his racing stock.

"It was just something I wanted to do," he said. "I'm only going to go around once and I wanted to coach hockey, so I did. I really loved doing that."

Among the players he coached were Drew Doughty, now a star defenceman with the Los Angeles Kings, and Peter Holland (now with Toronto). In the summers, Maxwell coached a travelling squad of players, some of whom included Matt Duchene (Colorado) and Kyle Clifford (Los Angeles). After four years and numerous changes with the Storm's hockey operations, Maxwell found himself unemployed. He wanted to scout full-time, but there weren't any opportunities.

"If I was in demand for hockey, that would be one thing, but there's a lot of guys that want to be part of a hockey team," he said. "You have no idea. When a guy gets fired from a hockey team, 25 calls are made that minute to a general manager. It's no different than this game. "When I came back (to training horses), I had a hard time, because (owners) had the thought I would go back to hockey."

He re-established a connection with owner Doug Millard, whom he had success training Elegantimage, who won almost $1 million in her career. Maxwell purchased an unraced two-year-old filly trotter, Dancehall Mistress, for $80,000 in Michigan on behalf of Millard. Glenn Tarver and Dr. David Goodrow each bought quarter shares off of Millard. The filly earned about $400,000 for the group before sold privately last October.

Throughout his career, Maxwell has tended to buy horses with a ceiling under $100,000. Control The Moment, who was offered at the Lexington Select Yearling Sale, fit into his budget. He was out of a mare, Lifesliltreasure, Maxell had trained at one time. The colt sold for a modest $47,000.

"I thought he would go for more than he did, but I don't write a price down," he said. "I was just hoping I could get him bought."

He sold quarter interests to Howard Taylor, who liked Well Said as a sire, Edwin Gold and Ben Mudry.

Maxwell said that of all the horses he has trained in his career, Control The Moment is by far the best. Maxwell became aware of how good the colt was when he trained him with the hard-knocking six-year-old pacer Ellis Park, who is a high-level condition horse.

"He was going head to head with him down the lane and that takes a lot of horse to do that," Maxwell said. "Ryan got off the bike that day and said, 'Holy crap, Dad, I think he's the best one we ever had.' It was just before I was going to qualify him. I don't get too excited about training them down because they all seem to train fairly well. I'm a laid-back trainer. I put a lot of miles into them. I don't pressure them ever, so I don't really know what bottom is until I start training them a little harder."

Maxwell said the DreamMaker Series, which had two legs and a final, helped the colt develop, followed by the Nassagaweya. But facing the top two-year-olds in training in North America, Control The Moment was put to the test.

"I knew he could go fast, it's just how far he can carry his speed," Maxwell said. "That was a pretty good mile the other night, he was parked three deep at the half when he cleared and just kept rolling along."

Driver Randy Waples remarked after the race: "He's a very, very unbelievably nice animal. It seems like he's got a huge set of lungs to him. He does not get tired."

There have been expressions of interest from people wanting to buy the colt, but Maxwell has no plans to sell at the moment.

"I did that when I was younger, but I'm 57 now and I enjoy having this horse," he said. "It's a pleasure to have. He does everything right and I want to have a good horse, too. If you just get blessed and have that one chance at one I'm not just going to sell him to somebody."

As an aside, after the race and following the winner's circle photos, Maxwell bolted to the paddock with Control The Moment, eschewing interviews. He wanted to take the colt to the test barn and cool him out afterward. He also had a horse racing later in the card.

As a "hands-on" horseman, Maxwell is more concerned about his horses than basking in the limelight.

"I don't get anything out of it," he said. "I like the horse to get all the credit because we just help them get there. It's all about the horses."

Much the same as it was with the hockey players he coached.

"It had really nothing to do with us at the end," he said. "It was all about those kids. They were good. It's the same with these horses. I got lucky buying this colt. Generally I don't buy pacers, although I'm going buy some now, but this guy here I just took a look at him because I trained the mare and she was a good mare, and I liked the farm this colt was raised at. But now it has nothing to do with me; it has everything to do with this horse. He's just as good horse.

"There's not a lot of difference between coaching junior hockey and doing what I'm doing here, and the hours are about the same. I'm not kidding you. I didn't realize how many hours these guys in hockey put into it. It's morning until night every day."

Similar to training horses. It's a job that doesn't always offer a lot of glory, even less so when you're not actively looking for it.

Four Michigan Drivers Seeking Huge Sums in Damage Suit After Race Fixing Case Went Nowhere

By Perry Lefko

Four Michigan-based drivers who resumed their careers last year following a suspension of more than three years for their alleged involvement in fixing races - even though they were never charged - will be seeking compensation from the Michigan Gaming Control Board for lost income and damages to their reputations.

John Moody, Donald Harmon, Wally McIlmurray and Rick Ray had their careers put on indefinite hold when the MGCB suspended them in May, 2010 for alleged race fixing at Swartz Creek, Northville and Hazel Park.

Under advisement from their legal counsel at the time, the drivers exercised their constitutional rights not to testify over concerns they might implicate themselves.

Attorney Hugh (Buck) Davis is fighting for four Michigan drivers

When the MGCB refused to accept their applications to race after 2010 and 2011, the drivers hired a high-profile civil rights lawyer, Hugh (Buck) Davis. He filed a lawsuit in April, 2012 in the U.S. District Court in the Eastern District of Michigan Southern Division, seeking the reinstatement of their licenses. The court ruled against them.

In May, 2014, Davis and the MGCB lawyers worked out an agreement to allow the drivers to apply for their licenses so they could race again.

This past June, the U.S. Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals ruled that the MGCB violated the constitutional rights of the drivers by suspending them because they refused to testify. Davis told Harness Racing Update that after the ruling, MGCB executive director Richard Kalm publicly stated the drivers' were still under investigation. Davis said that is untrue, and the suggestion they are has caused problems for the horsemen in some jurisdictions or racetracks that won't allow them to race because of integrity concerns.

Davis has filed a motion to amend the complaint against the MGCB because of Kalm's comments.

"We're going to be looking for a big pay day as soon as (the MGCB) come to their senses or face a trial," Davis said.

A spokesperson for the MGCB declined comment when contacted by Harness Racing Update.

Davis, who successfully represented clients that challenged the legality of the Nixon administration's domestic political wiretap program in the '70s, said he has already wrung up $600,000 in legal expenses. In this type of litigation, the lawyer receives a percentage of any money awarded to the plaintiffs in either a court proceeding or settlement should the parties come to a resolution.

"I started out suing the government for governmental abuse in my first-ever case and it went to the Supreme Court," Davis said. "I've been suing the government ever since. It's the way I make my money. They always fight and they have all kinds of abilities and protections and therefore it's not unusual for cases to take three years or longer. That's just the nature of the business and the reason not many people do it - you can't afford to stand there that long and wait to win - but I've done it long enough that I settle enough cases every year to keep me going while the others go through the process. Most of my work is policy misconduct, police brutality, but the federal civil rights laws cover every state or local governmental employee who violates peoples' rights."

Moody is seeking justice for the mental, physical, emotional and financial damage he has endured being labeled a race-fixer.

"I've raced for over 40 years and never had a problem with racing in my life," Moody said. "I've trained for a lot of retired judges and a lot of retired cops. When this whole mess went down, we were like 'what in hell is going on here?'"

"I've been licensed everywhere around the country my entire career. When I got back driving, I wanted to go to Pompano last winter. Florida said they would license me, but the racetrack said based on my reputation, which had always been clean up until this little event, they did not want me to come down. Ohio is the same thing. They will license me, but the racetracks said it's not in the best interests to have (me) here based on my reputation."

"I've been in the business driving horses since 1977, won numerous awards and have great friends and never had a problem anywhere I went. Now I'm the guy that fixed races. I'm 56 years old and horse racing is the only thing I know. What else am I going to do? My reputation is shot."

Moody, who had to file for bankruptcy protection on his farm while out of work, said he will be seeking more than $10 million because of the toll it has taken on him and the damage to his reputation. He totaled more than $320,000 in purse earnings for the horses he drove in 2009. Last year, he had only 24 drives and purse earnings under $10,000. This year, he has driven less than 100 times and his horses have earned slightly more than $50,000.

"One thing I've learned about this process: no one is going to ram a settlement down my throat," he said. "I've had two heart attacks over this, four hospital stays and a stroke. I'm done with these corrupt officials and they are going to pay the price. It's that simple."

"I can tell you this much, if I was sitting in a room with three other guys and one guy said he wants over $10 million, my first thing is 'I'm not going to take any less than him.' I'm saying from John Moody's perspective it's going to cost over $10 million. I was on the front page all over the country as the race fixer."

Harmon, who is racing in Indiana, said he cannot race horses in Ontario until he comes in for a hearing with the racing commission because the MGCB recently said the horsemen are still under investigation.

"There is no investigation. It's been over since 2010," Harmon said. "The Gaming Board said we got our licenses back but we're still under investigation. Ontario won't license me, it's costing me a lot of money. I told them I would come up there in November and get it straightened out so I can race up there."

He has a homebred two-year-old colt pacer, Blue Fox, he owns, trains and races that was staked to races in Ontario but was scratched by the Ontario Racing Commission from two races in July.

"If you know anything about the horse racing business, you know what kind of expenses there are from breeding the horse to getting it ready to race," he said.

Harmon said he hasn't thought about how much money he will be seeking in damages.

"I've had two heart attacks over this, four hospital stays and a stroke. I'm done with these corrupt officials and they are going to pay the price. It's that simple."

Driver John Moody

"I knowing we're getting awfully close to sitting at the table with these people and whatever Buck says I'm going with him," Harmon said. "It's affected my reputation. I had a lot of horses at the time - I've got quite a few now - and mentally it took a big stress on me because I've got three kids and we have a 40-acre farm in Michigan. I had to send my wife (Krista) on the road to train and we were separated for a couple years. It was hard on me and the kids, (just) every day waking up. As far as my health, knock on wood I've been okay."

"I'm not driving my horses at Hoosier. It's a pretty tough driving colony. Everybody around here won't use me because they probably think I am fixing races. It's hurt my reputation. I trained horses for a lot of guys who stuck behind me. They knew it was b.s. from the start."

His horses earned on average more than $500,000 in purse earnings in the years leading up to his suspension. He totaled $241,363 in purse earnings last year from 246 drives. This year he has made slightly over $200,000 with less than 200 drives.

Davis had no knowledge of the horse racing industry or any of the horsemen before taking on the case. To him, it was strictly a matter of the abuse of civil rights with no basis to the claim of race fixing. Moreover, Davis said the matter was driven by a "police rogue operation."

According to court documents, the race fixing allegation surfaced in 2009. Gary Post, the Operations Manager of the Horse Racing Section of the MGCB, received an anonymous call about several drivers, trainers and gamblers involved in a race-fixing scheme that took place in 2008 and 2009. Following the tip, Post immediately began an investigation and enlisted steward Robert Coberley to help in reviewing suspicious races. Initially, Coberley and Post focused their attention on eight harness races, and reported their findings to the Michigan State Police, which conducted an investigation and later executed search warrants.

The matter became public when the Michigan State Police and MGCB indicated in a media release in March, 2010 they executed multiple search warrants at three private residences in Southeast Michigan, as part of an ongoing investigation into individuals suspected of race-fixing, and that Ontario Racing Commission was also involved in the investigation. The release indicated investigators identified as many as 30 harness driver, trainers, owners, and gamblers who are "believed to have conspired to predetermine the outcome of certain harness horse races" at Hazel Park, Northville Downs and Sports Creek Raceway "to earn a profit through fraudulent wagering." It was noted the three tracks had been working and cooperating fully with investigators and were not under investigation.

"Anyone attempting to fraudulently influence the outcome of a horse race or to profit through fraudulent wagering is guilty of a felony," Col. Peter C. Munoz, Director of the MSP, said in the release. "The MSP takes these allegations seriously and is working closely with the MGCB to fully investigate these allegations and any race-related illegal activity."

"The MGCB is committed to ensuring the highest standards of integrity in Michigan's horse racing industry," Kalm said in the release. "Competitors can be assured races will be conducted fairly and those placing wagers should feel confident they have a fair chance to win." Phone numbers were provided for anyone with information about these allegations or "other race-related illegal activities."

Moody said he and the other horsemen co-operated with the MGCB when they were originally accused of race fixing because they had nothing to hide, but said a "rogue cop" called up their lawyer and told him to tell his clients to be prepared to be arrested immediately after testifying. Moody said that's when he and the other horsemen were advised to exercise their right not to say anything. But he said he was told by two members of the MGCB they were not allowed to plead the fifth because they had no rights as licensed horsemen of the MGCB. They were suspended in May, 2010 and immediately branded as race-fixers.

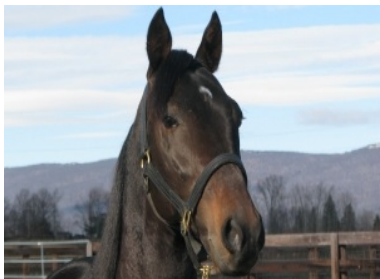

Kalm was quoted on mlive.com saying the horsemen were suspended for not co-operating as required by their licenses. He added "the license is a privilege and that's how we view it. We need transparency and co-operation going forward." He added the suspensions could be lifted at any time.

But two years later, after repeated attempts to get licensed, the drivers hired Davis and he put forward the lawsuit. The MGCB, Kalm, MGCB members Post and Al Ernst, state stewards Daryl Parker, Richard Garrison and Billy Lee Williams, and John Lessnau, an investigator for the board, were named as defendants.

The drivers sought "declaratory and injunctive relief" concerning the legality of the suspension of their licenses, but the court ruled against them.

Rock N Roll Heaven on the Move, Will Stand in New Jersey at Deo Volente

"Heavenly" news for Deo Volente as it has added Rock N Roll Heaven to its stallion roster

Deo Volente Farms in New Jersey has landed another top sire as it was announced yesterday by the Bellino family that Rock N Roll Heaven will stand there in 2016. Deo Volente is also the current home of 2014 Hambletonian winner Trixton.

Though Rock N Roll Heaven has gotten off to a strong start as a sire, Joe Bellino, a spokesperson for the Bellino family stable, said he was disappointed in the number of mares the stallion was bred to this year at Blue Chip Farms in New York. With so many outstanding pacing stallions in New York it appears that Rock N Roll Heaven was having a hard time standing out in the crowd.

According to USTA stats, Rock N Roll Heaven was bred to just 59 mares this year.

"We wanted a change," Joe Bellino said. "His horses were racing real well and he was the No. 1 rookie last year in New York but we were just disappointed in his numbers in New York this year, which were surprisingly low."

Bellino said that he and his father, Frank, considered several farms in the U.S. and in Canada and that Deo Volente was not high up on anyone's list. Many are wary of standing stallions in New Jersey because of the weak sire stakes program in the state.

"On Wednesday we were making our decision and Deo Volente wasn't even in the conversation," Bellino said. "Then dad looked at me and said, 'I want to do the right thing.' He said 'I want to send him to New Jersey.' That came out of nowhere. I said, 'why?' He said, 'Jeff Gural has put up all this money and everybody is running away, it's time somebody runs to help him and New Jersey racing instead of complaining and saying Jersey racing is going down the tubes.'"

"He wanted to do the right thing. He is a huge fan of Bob Marks and likes (Deo Volente owner) Mike Gulotta. That dad decided to send him to New Jersey, I was as surprised as anyone."

Rock N Roll Heaven's second crop are currently 2-year-olds. He has already produced four horses that have earned in excess of $300,000, including Sassa Hanover, who has made $704,002.

Habitat and Barn Doll Highlight NYSS Championship Races at Yonkers

By Bill Finley

Ron Burke wasn't planning to be at Yonkers Saturday night, not, at least with Habitat. He had the son of Conway

Habitat will be hard to beat in the NYSS finals Saturday at Yonkers

Hall penciled in for a start the same night at Mohawk in the elims for the Canadian Trotting Classic. But after Habitat scored a minor upset last week in the Yonkers Trot, Burke concluded that there was no better fit for his horse than Yonkers and the $225,000 NYSS finals.

Habitat likes Yonkers and Yonkers likes Habitat. After beating Hambletonian winner Pinkman in the Yonkers Trot he is 2 for 3 lifetime at Yonkers and he broke in his one loss there. Overall, he's 4 for 6 on half-mile tracks and 10 for 21 on all other type tracks.

Suddenly the hottest horse in the 3-year-old male trotting division with there straight wins Habitat looks like he'll be an overwhelming favorite in the $225,000 NYSS division for 3-year-old male trotters. He not only won the Yonkers Trot, he crushed the competition, winning by 3 1/3 lengths.

"I wasn't surprised that he won," said Burke, whose Crazy Wow was supposed to be his strongest entrant in the Yonkers Trot but broke stride. "With any horse in that race you are a little worried how they will get around the first turn but once he did I figured he'd be OK. This horse hasn't received the attention some of the others have in his group but he's very solid and he knows how to win."

He will, however, have a new driver as Jim Morrill Jr. takes over for Brian Sears, who will be driving at Mohawk. Morrill will be Habitat's third different driver over his last three races and his fourth over his last five starts.

"We'll be fine with Jim because he's a good driver and has driven Habitat before," Burke said. "But I really wish the sport could do a better job coordinating these big races so you don't have to worry about your regular drivers not being available."

Like Habitat, Barn Doll is by Conway Hall and is having a stellar year. She is 10 for 12 on the season for trainer and co-owner Steven Pratt. But unlike Habitat she has done all her racing in New York and has not ventured out on the Grand Circuit.

"We only paid $20,000 for her and when you do that it's hard to make $30,000 in staking payments," Pratt said. "But she's been a great horse for us. I think she definitely could be a top three horse next year."

The last horse to beat Bran Doll this year is Jewels In Hock, who eat her rival by a lengths in an Aug. 13 sire stakes event at Yonkers. Pratt admitted Jewels In Hock is always a horse to worry about.

"She's definitely the biggest threat, especially since she drew the four, inside of us in the five," he said.

Pratt said Saturday's race will likely be the last this year for Bran Doll as there are no more sire stakes on the calendar and she is not staked for any major events. He said he is leaning toward selling her this fall, but has not made a final decision.

"If we sell her my wife (Nancy) would cry a lot," Pratt said. "We keep her at home and the other horses are at the farm. She gets transported each day, stays at home in a paddock we have here. We've had some nice ones but she's at another level. She's the best horse I've ever had."

Three-year-old pacing fillies will meet in the sixth race, one of the more wide open affairs on the card. The Burke-trained Band Of Angels has the best credentials on paper but will likely have a hard time winning from the eight post. In he race for 3-year-old pacing males, the Tom Fanning-trained entry of Betting Exchange and My Spirit Soars is the 7-5 morning line favorite, but will have to deal with Rockin In Heavem a winner of three of her last four for trainer Ian Moore.

Bangor Employee Killed When Struck by Starting Gate

Bangor Raceway employee Edwin Reynolds, 64, was killed Wednesday in a freak accident when struck by the wings of the starting gate. There was no racing or qualifiers that day at Bangor but track employees were working on the starting gate car in preparation for the upcoming meet. It was not immediately clear how Reynolds came to be struck by the gate.

Bangor has canceled the races scheduled for Sept. 14 and 15 and will not race until what was the next scheduled racing date, Oct. 5.

The incident is under investigation by the Bangor Police Department and the Maine Occupational Safety and Health Administration.

"This was obviously a tragic accident that happened to a valued employee," said Chris McElean, who heads the racing division for track owner Penn National Gaming. "He was struck by a portion of the wing of the starting gate while it was being tested for the meet. The circumstances of how this happened are still being investigated."

"This incident has affected a lot of people. Mr. Reynolds had worked at Bangor for 21 years. We decided to cancel the races next week out of respect to Mr. Reynolds and to give the members of the Bangor family time to grieve."

Brad Hanners Fundraiser Saturday at Scioto

A fundraiser will be held Saturday at Scioto Downs to benefit driver Brad Hanners, who in July was diagnosed with renal cell carcinoma, a type of kidney cancer. Hanners is at The Ohio State University's James Cancer Hospital, preparing to begin treatment.

The 43-year-old Hanners, an Ohio native who lives 50 miles southwest of Columbus with his wife Alicia and children JorDan, Austin, Luke and Mia, has posted 4,888 wins as a driver and 357 victories as a trainer during his career. He enjoyed some of his greatest successes at Harrington Raceway in Delaware, where he captured three consecutive driving titles from 2003-05. He also was a driving champion at Dover Downs.

Hanners set career highs with 478 wins and $4.74 million in purses in 2005. His top triumphs include the 2009 Dan Patch Invitational with Mister Big.

The fundraiser will include a raffle for a race bike and harness plus a silent auction featuring a variety of items from equipment to harness racing memorabilia and sporting event tickets. Also, "Hanners Strong" T-shirts will be available for purchase. The event will begin at 5:30 p.m. in an area between the Scioto Downs clubhouse and grandstand.

Scioto Downs is hosting Super Night on Saturday, with a full slate of Ohio Sire Stakes championships plus the Jim Ewart Memorial Pace and the Chip Noble Memorial Trot.

Proceeds from the fundraiser will be used to help offset medical and travel expenses for Hanners and his family. In addition to Saturday's fundraiser, a GoFundMe account has been set up for donations. The account can be found here.

"Brad never really had any symptoms of being sick other than back pain, and what driver doesn't have back pain," said Brandi Sykes, who is helping to coordinate the event. "We'd just like everybody to pray for him and help him get through this."

Lexington Selected Set to Launch

The catalog has been mailed, it's available for download on the Equineline app and website, and videos have been posted. It can mean only one thing: it's "all systems go" for the 2015 Lexington Selected Yearling Sale.

This year's sale, which gets underway a day earlier than in the past, on Monday, Oct. 5, has shaped up as one of the company's strongest sales ever, according to co-managers David Reid and Randy Manges.

"We've weathered a lot of storms over the years, as far as the economy and all else, and this sale has always stood up well regardless," Manges said. "It's truly the sale of champions as we like to say. Our consignors are many of the world's most renowned breeders, and buyers know this is where they can get a great horse at every price level," he added.

A new item on the sale's agenda this year comes on Tuesday, the second night. Those in attendance will have the opportunity to bid on--via live auction--a one-of-a-kind horse sculpture to benefit the Harness Horse Youth Foundation. The sculpture, made by a Kentucky artist/welder from nearly 1,000 pieces of repurposed metals, will be on display at the Brittany Farms consignment prior to its sale.

The sales company also noted that successful buyers at Monday night's opening session will receive a complimentary copy of the newly released book "Meadow Skipper-The Untold Story," by authors Victoria M. Howard and Bob Marks. The book will also be on sale at several locations in Lexington during the Grand Circuit meet and sale.

Jate Lobell Passes

It is with great sadness that Kentuckiana Farms

Jate Lobell

announces the passing of Jate Lobell. The 31-year-old stallion stood at Kentuckiana Farms for 22 years before being retired from active duty in 2009.

Jate Lobell (No Nukes - J.R. Amy, p, 3, 1:51.2M, $2,231,402) impacted the Standardbred breed like few other. At 2, a World Champion, the son of No Nukes was voted 2-year-old pacing colt of the year, undefeated in 15 starts. At 3, Jate Lobell earned 3-year-old pacing colt of the year honors while winning the Confederation Cup, North America Cup, New Jersey Classic, New Jersey Futurity, American National, and 5 NJSS events. He retired to stud duty after a remarkable 3-year-old season as the third richest pacer of all time and was syndicated at an incredible $12 Million Dollar Valuation.

It was in the breeding shed where he made a significant and lasting impact as a regular at the top of all stallion categories throughout his stallion career. His offspring earned a remarkable $105,341,187. Jate Lobell's offspring have averaged over $82,000 per starter, having produced many of greats in recent racing history like Riyadh ($2,763,527), David's Pass ($1,652,500), Gothic Dream ($1,528,671), Village Jasper ($1,057,595), to name a few.

Not only was Jate Lobell a super-sire, he will long be remembered as a prolific broodmare sire, with his daughters producing winners of over $203,978,794 including Mister Big ($4,008,257), My Little Dragon ($2,318,623), Southwind Lynx ($1,763,389), and Sportswriter ($1,566,460), etc.

In 2004 Jate Lobell was nominated to the Living Horse Hall of Fame as a racehorse and stallion.

"Jate Lobell's legacy will live on for generations. He was simply one of the greatest ever on the track, in the breeding shed and as a broodmare sire. Jate Lobell put Kentuckiana Farms on the map and we will cherish his memory for years to come. It has been an honor to take care of him as a long-time member of our family. He will be missed," said Bob Brady for Kentuckiana Farms.

Rookie Trotting Fillies Battle in Peaceful Way Eliminations

Courtesy of Woodbine Entertainment

CAMPBELLVILLE, ON - A trio of eliminations were contested Thursday night at Mohawk Racetrack for the Peaceful Way Stakes.

A group of 22 two-year-old trotting fillies were separated into three $30,000 eliminations with the top three finishers and a fourth place finisher drawn by lot advancing to the $410,000 final on Saturday, September 19.

In the first division, Staffan Lind trainee Celebrity Eventsy looked like she was all by herself on the racetrack winning easily in 1:55.2. _03 CELEBRITY EVENTSY RC1.jpg Driven by Brett Miller, Celebrity Eventsy sprinted out to lead and posted an opening-quarter of :27.4. A first turn break by Hills Angel, who sat second, left the Lind trainee on top by about ten lengths down the backstretch. After a middle fractions of :56.3 and 1:26.1, Celebrity Eventsy trotted home in :29.1 to score an easy-looking four-length victory.

"The only problem tonight she was pretty hot," said Miller following the race. "Going to the gate I was really worried, when I got up to the gate she pushed her face up against it and I was lucky to get her out of there trotting and once I got her out of there she was pretty hot and wanting to go fast."

Ultimate Shopper inherited second thanks to the first turn breaker and never gave up that position, while Pennies From Above overtook third in mid-stretch to qualify for the final.

A daughter of Manofmanymissions, Celebrity Eventsy is owned by Celebrity Farms and now has two wins from six starts to begin her career. The Lind trainee lowered her career mark by a fifth of a second Thursday evening and increased her bankroll to over $34,000.

Celebrity Eventsy paid $7.30 to win.

The second division featured Caprice Hill coming out on top in a great stretch battle with All The Time.

Sent off as the 4/5 favourite, Caprice Hill flashed some early speed for driver Tim Tetrick, but All The Time and Yannick Gingras, at odds of 2/1, were able to power by on the outside and take command heading into the first turn. Emoticon Hanover, the third-choice, left from post two and got away third.

The fillies sat in those positions through fractions of :27.4, :58.1 and 1:27.1 to set up a stretch battle.

In the lane, Caprice Hill came to the outside and went toe-to-toe with All The Time. The fillies slugged it out, but in deep stretch Caprice Hill was able overtake the lead and win by three-quarters of a length in 1:55. Emoticon Hanover stayed right with the top pair and came up just a neck short of getting by All The Time for second.

A daughter of Kadabra, Caprice Hill is trained by Tony Alagna for owner Tom Hill. The rookie trotting filly has drawn plenty of hype for her impressive performances this season and now has five wins from six starts.

"I was happy with (the two-hole)," said Tetrick following the race. "Yannick's got a nice filly and it's always good to follow one of Takter's and take it as easy on mine this week because next week is where the big money is and hopefully that trip will pay off next week."

Thursday night was Tetrick's second time driving the Alagna trainee and he was able to gain some redemption after driving the filly in her only loss on August 4.

"I was kind of mad at myself or embarrassed she got beat," said Tetrick. "She should have never got beat, she's a nice filly and luckily she showed that again tonight."

Caprice Hill increased her earnings to over $172,000 with the victory and lowered her career mark by two-fifths. She paid $3.70 to win.

Could It Be Magic stretched her win streak to four in a row with a 1:56.4 in the final elimination. _08 COULD IT BE MAGIC RC.jpg

Trained and driven by Wayne Henry, Could It Be Magic, the 3/5 favourite, got away second behind High Heels, who posted an opening-quarter in :27.4. There was no switch in position through middle-half panels of :57 and 1:26.3.

Could It Be Magic popped the pocket at the top of the lane and overtook the lead. Dewdle All Day tried to chase down the favourite, but she came up a length and a quarter short, as the Henry trainee scored her sixth win in seven starts.

Crazy Wild Desire was able to get up late for third to advance to the final. High Heels faded back to fourth, but afterwards won the draw of fourth-place finishers to advance to the final.

Following the race, Henry said Could It Be Magic is a simple and versatile filly.

"She's pretty straight forward," he said. "She can do it both ways. She likes the front, but she will come from

Toscana trainees double up in Reynolds

By James Witherite (Tioga Downs Racing Media)

NICHOLS, NY - Linda Toscana trainees Cut and Paste ($2.10) and Soft Idea ($2.40) both achieved early leads and never looked back in their respective $31,894 Reynolds Stake divisions for 2-year-old pacing fillies on Thursday (September 10) evening at Tioga Downs, while Katies Rocker ($2.20, part of entry) was king among five 2-year-old pacing colts and geldings in their lone $64,788 dash.

The first division for pacing fillies, contested as race 3, saw Cut and Paste work clear of Twice an Angel (Matt Kakaley) in the initial stages, controlling the terms throughout her 1:54.3 triumph. Jim Marohn, Jr. comfortably rated sectionals of :28.1, :57.4, and 1:26.2 with the daughter of Well Said, and Cut and Paste responded immediately to the late challenge of Twice and Angel to prevail by 1-1/2 lengths.

In the second division, carded as race 5, Soft Idea settled off early pacesetters JK Fannie (Kakaley) and Wine Snob (Mike Simons), drafting through a :28.1 initial quarter before brushing to the fore upon entering the home straight on the first occasion. Once clear on the lead, Jim Morrill, Jr. rated a :57 middle half with the American Ideal filly. Off the far turn, Soft Idea dug in to repel dual challengers JK Fannie and Wine Snob, both of which closed in from either side in a dead heat for second, three-quarters of a length behind the odds-on winner.

While pupils of Toscana took both filly divisions of the Reynolds, a Jim Campbell trainee prevailed in the lone split for colts and geldings. Katies Rocker worked clear of his four rivals with no trouble at all, sprinting off through a :27.3 initial quarter before Simon Allard rated a :31 breather to race's midpoint. On the backstretch, the Rocknroll Hanover gelding was nudged along by his entymate Show the Fashion (Kakaley), but Katies Rocker proved far superior in the end. The Fashion Farms homebred edged clear by 1-1/2 lengths, using a :55.1 back half mile to cap a 1:53.4 victory over Safensound Hanover (Morrill), who gave chase from the pocket once clear in the final sixteenth.
