

With Historical Racing Machines, Red Mile Finally Has Reason to be Optimistic

By Bill Finley

LEXINGTON, KY – When Joe Costa, the President and CEO of the Red Mile, first hit town some 15 years ago to run the Central Kentucky racetrack he reported back to the owners of the racetrack and refused to sugarcoat the situation he found himself in.

"There's nothing in the box," he told them.

The Red Mile didn't have a particularly robust betting handle, it didn't have gaming, it didn't even have thoroughbred simulcasting, making it the lone racetrack in America with that distinction. The mission back then for Costa and the racetrack's new owners, which included Joe Thomson, George Segal and Frank Antonacci, was to find a way to keep the sport's most historic racetrack in business. But how? How do you do that when there is nothing in the box?

Not much changed over the ensuing 15 years and Costa now admits that the Red Mile was bleeding money to the tune of about $2 million a year.

That probably won't be the case anymore. The box now includes 902 Historical Racing Machines. What they mean so far as purse and dates increases remains anyone's guess, but their presence at The Red Mile is the best news the track has had in many decades and has likely saved it from extinction.

"What this means is that we will have more tools to work with to enhance racing at what I would consider one of the greatest racetracks in America," Costa said.

There was a lot of pomp and circumstance yesterday at The Red Mile as track owners, management and Lexington Mayor Jim Gray were among those on hand for an official ribbon-cutting ceremony to open the gaming room that houses the machines. The gaming facility actually opened to the public last Saturday.

The crowds in the Instant Racing parlor have been light so far, but that's somewhat by design as The Red Mile wants to get all the kinks out before putting on a marketing blitz. The project is a joint effort between The Red Mile and Keeneland, which will split the revenue from the machines on a 50-50 basis. In addition, Keeneland has closed up shop as an off-track simulcasting facility and all simulcasting in Lexington will now be conducted at The Red Mile. However, Keeneland will still retain all the revenue from betting on thoroughbred races.

From the outside, the ancient 140-year-old track has never looked better as $42 million was spent on building a new facade, new entrances, the gaming room and a new simulcasting area. The grandstand itself has remained largely unchanged.

With the Historical Racing machines having been in operation for less than a week it's far too early to tell what kind of revenue will be brought in. The Red Mile got projections from three different consulting firms but Costa doesn't want to make any predictions until he has more evidence to work with.

However, he can point to the situation at Kentucky Downs, a thoroughbred track in a remote and rural area of southern Kentucky. There, with half as many machines as there are at The Red Mile, they are handling an average of $2 million a day.

"We do know that everywhere they've been they have worked," Costa said. "Corey Johnsen's track (Kentucky Downs) is out in the middle of a field in an area where you can't buy a sandwich for miles around and look at what they're doing. They're working in Hot Springs, Arkansas, in Idaho, in Wyoming. They're all in isolated places with small populations."

The hope is that if Historical Racing can be a big hit at places like Kentucky Downs it can be an even bigger hit in a relatively large urban town like Lexington.

"No one has ever tried to put this many Historical Racing machines under one roof in an urban environment, so we're going to find something out," Costa said. "The consultants felt that with the sophistication of this market and with 400,000 people in the area, they believe we will have a big advantage."

Kentucky racing, both thoroughbred and standardbred, has been engaged in a long fight to bring gaming to the racetracks, many of whom have suffered because they have to go up against racino tracks in nearby states like Indiana and Ohio. The most desired result would have been to get slot machines or, better yet, full-fledged casinos, at the racetracks, but that battle kept ending in defeat. Historical Racing machines are meant to look like slot machines but the whether the player wins or loses actually rests on the outcome of an old horse race. Gamblers don't dislike them, but they clearly like real slot machines better. Costa realizes that is a challenge.

Three of 902 Historical Racing Machines at the Red Mile

"I am not going to pretend that a slot machine isn't far more sophisticated and far more entertaining than the machines we have here," he said. "They will not hold your fascination or mesmerize like the slot machines do but people still like to play these games. And we have the convenience factor going for us versus the casinos in Ohio and Indiana.

"How do you make up for our machines not being as sexy as slot machines? You make up for it with customer service and entertainment."

A set percentage of the winnings from the machines will go into purses and other money will be put aside for the Kentucky Standardbred Breeders Association. Along with the horsemen, Costa and the Red Mile's owners still must decide how best to allocate the additional revenue and how long to make future meets. Costa did say that preserving and even building on the Grand Circuit meet will be a priority and that he also believes it is important to do something for the local "little guy," horsemen who have struggled mightily over the last several years. He also said he would like to see The Red Mile become a regular stop for the Breeders Crown.

"There are many mouths to feed and some of those mouths have not had a drink of water in a long time," he said.

That includes the three owners of the track, Segal, Thomson and Antonacci. They have kept The Red Mile alive, Costa said, "because they didn't want to see it turned into a shopping mall." No doubt had most anyone other than people who love the sport and are prominent owners and breeders been in charge of The Red Mile it never would have lasted this long. The thought of finally making a profit due to Historical Racing is something they no doubt clung to all these years.

The Red Mile has been saved, but Costa will not be waving a victory flag. He still sees a troubled industry that refuses to work for the common good, something that clearly upsets him. He also worries about the unknown, like, perhaps, the opening of an actual casino in Lexington.

"No," Costa said when asked if he were in a celebratory mood yesterday. "It doesn't feel good at all. I want to be as honest as I can. I tell Frank, George and Joe, I wake up scared and I go to sleep scared. All this does is change what I am scared of. I'm no longer scared of solving how to save The Red Mile, I'm now scared of trying to preserve it. The Speaker of the House in Kentucky is going to file a bill for a constitutional amendment for full gaming. We just made a $42 million investment and I have the Speaker of the House trying to put me out of business by granting a full gaming license to someone in Lexington. We have to always be vigilant and fearful of political and legislative advances

"A lot of people have congratulated me and in a way it feels very nice. I am intellectually and personally satisfied to have been able to do this rubix cube, but what we have basically proven is that we can spend a lot of money. Now we have to prove we can run this and run it with a level of respect that insures trust from the citizens of the Commonwealth in our operation."

Perhaps he is right and the challenges for The Red Mile are far from over with. But this much is certain: there's finally something in the box.

Gutnick To Buy Only Offspring of Chapter Seven

Richard Gutnick, among the co-owners of Chapter Seven, has been so impressed by the horse's foals that he has said that he will buy only Chapter Seven's at the upcoming Harrisburg and Lexington sales.

Chapter Seven's first crop of horses are now yearlings.

"We already saw at the Goshen sale how well they are selling and I already bought one there," Gutnick said. "I am going to buy Chapter Seven's exclusively this year. That's how strong a believer I am in this horse. You look at them in the field and they can flat out fly. Everyone is saying the same thing about them. I am a strong believer in him as a stallion and I plan to do everything I can to support him."

I love what I see and I'd be happy to take on new partners in this venture to buy up many of his offspring."

In other news relating to Gutnick's horses the owner said that his Hambletonian winner Market Share will be given a break to try to recuperate and get back into top form. The 6-year-old is 1 for 9 on the year and is coming off a sixth-place finish in the Maple Leaf Trot elims. He said there are no current plans to retire him.

"He has had his little issues, so it's time to give him time off," Gutnick said. "It's not fair to keep racing him right now. We're going to turn him out and then make a decision later. We are not looking at retiring him but we will consider all the options. He has lost a step but that doesn't mean we can't get him healthy and back to his best."

Crawford Farms Buys Split The House To Race In The Jug

By Perry Lefko

Michelle Crawford will be going to Ohio next week to watch the Little Brown Jug for the first time, and she'll be rooting for a racehorse – specifically one she and her husband Al have just bought.

The Crawfords, who own and operate Crawford Farms, the New York-based nursery that is developing into one of the major breeding operations in the U.S., purchased Split The House for an undisclosed amount this week. The Rocknroll Hanover colt had been racing for the ownership group of trainer James (Friday) Dean and partners Scott Horner and Peter Milligan.

Split The House, whose name is a reference to a term in the sport of curling, won seven of 12 races and $207,188 this year. He did not race as a two-year-old. He was purchased at the Harrisburg Yearling Sales for $60,000, and started off his career winning four consecutive races.

Split The House will race in the Jug for new owners Michelle and Al Crawford (New Image Media)

He failed to earn a spot in the North America Cup and placed fifth in the NA Cup Consolation race. But he rebounded to win two races at Mohawk, including a minor stakes, and then won the $200,000 New Jersey Classic with a mark of 1:48 3/5. Most recently he placed third in the Simcoe Stakes at Mohawk.

The Crawfords had been following the colt's progress because he is a half-sister to Cult Status, whom they had bought as a racehorse/broodmare prospect last year. Cult Status, a five-year-old in foal to American Ideal, won six of 53 races and banked $237,085. She had a lifetime mark of 1:52 3/5.

"When we have our mares, we do a virtual stable and try to follow the offspring to see what we're doing as far as the offspring is concerned," Michelle told Harness Racing Update. "We root for the success of the brothers and the sisters obviously. It makes our pedigree better when we go to sell babies.

"We just started watching Split The House and I just fell in love with him. I thought he had a great shoulder. I loved to watch him race and he kept winning. I swear when I would cheer him on people would congratulate me like I owned him. I just fell in love with him over the screen."

She received a text from trainer Chris Oakes earlier this week asking if she was interested in buying him.

"People bring us deals every single day," Michelle said. "My phone rings more than I can even answer it at this point because of how fast we are growing in the business. I don't think Chris knew we have the sister. So when he brought the deal forward, I said 'don't get me excited until it something that is reasonable. How realistic is this and how are we really going to get this done before the Jug?'"

"We knew he was Jug eligible and we knew he was definitely a competitor with the rest of that field. We were kind of interested more if the price was right and he vetted out, which was my main concern. They did such a good job with him this year. Our question was why do they want to sell? These are normal questions and anxiety that goes along with trying to buy something that you really like. I'm pretty excited."

In particular because she is going to the Jug, something she has not experienced in 10 years in the business. Her husband grew up in the industry and had been telling her she hadn't lived until she had gone to the Jug.

"I've been to the Meadowlands Pace, Hambletonian Day and he said, 'you need to go to the Jug,'" she said. "We've had success with some horses, but not worthy of being in the Jug. We had a few hopefuls, but nothing that panned out. It would have been a stretch to try to think they'd be there. I just kind of blew it off for another year, so when this opportunity came up I was beyond excited."

"Al knew I really wanted to go. It worked out great. I couldn't be happier now. Now you're praying for a good post position in the eliminations and the second heat. I think he's strong enough. I don't know. It would be silly of me to try to predict anything because there's so much competition in there, especially with Wiggle It Jiggle It and Artspeak."

Michelle said she and her husband are not in the business of buying colts.

"Al usually doesn't want me to get into buying the colts too much," she said. "He forces me into buying the fillies, but I love, love, the colts. Having a stallion on the farm is another part of what is driving this a little bit. We have 47 mares in foal now for next year and we have 27 foals going to the sale this year. So we have about 65 mares for the following year. We're going to probably be culling some just to keep with our pedigrees. The ones that aren't worth culling or wouldn't have value to somebody I'd put out in my retirement paddock."

She said "a lot would have to go well" for Split The House to stand as a future stallion at Crawford Farms.

"But you take the dreaming part away from this business and it's not fun anymore," she said. "Everybody likes to look at the glamorous side of it and think they bought a colt that's going to be a stallion. I would like to think as I sit here, 'yeah, it's going to all fall into place and he's going to win big races and the Breeders Crown after this and go on to be a super four-year-old and five-year-old and we're going to have a ready-made stallion for our farm.' But a lot can happen between now and then.

"He was a very wealthy horse, he showed some potential. I didn't know what the upside on his racing potential was anymore, but I just thought 'what the heck?' I know it's tough to really find that horse because you have a lot of bidders. You have a lot of people out there and (the sellers) are coming to the big boys first, (trainers) Ron Burke and Jimmy Takter, I'm sure. I don't really expect to get that call, so when I got that text I was like 'come on, stop it.'

"We're not actively seeking it, so it really did fall into our laps. It was just one of those ridiculous things that we had really followed him because of the mare. When he won at the Meadowlands, I was out of my mind. I was really excited to see the (Canadian) invader do his business at the Meadowlands.

"After seeing that, I would never imagine that anyone would be selling him or that we'd be in the running for buying him."

Yoder Hoping Natural Herbie Is Back In Form

By Perry Lefko

So, what's been the deal this year with Natural Herbie?

He was one of those feel-good stories last year, winning 12 of 23 races and earning more than $360,000. He proved he was more than just a horse that dominated in Indiana. Add in the fact he was driven, trained and owned by the same person – Verlin Yoder, whose name alone added to the lore of this trotter – well, you couldn't help but root for Natural Herbie. Yoder was voted Horseman of the Year.

Fast forward to 2015 and the results haven't been nearly the same. He has raced 15 times, winning three and earning less than $100,000. He won a division of the Maple Leaf Trot last Saturday at Mohawk Racetrack and will be in the $680,000 final this Saturday, by far the biggest race of his life. This time he will face the likes of JL Cruze, the dominant older trotter this year in North America, 2013 Horse of the Year Bee A Magician and the likes of Flanagan Memory, Intimidate, Obrigado, Lindy Tru Grit and Resolve, to name some of the higher-profile competitors in the field. His win last week begs the question, what's been going on with the horse this year? Was last week's win, beating the likes of Bee A Magician, Lindy Tru Grit, JL Cruze and EL Titan a one-off type of thing or perhaps a return to form?

"He's had some issues," Yoder told Harness Racing Update. "He's had an abscess in a hind foot. It's always taken him a while to get there. I don't know if it's because he's older or didn't want to do it before now. I don't know. He seems to be headed on the right path now. I was surprised he won, but he was showing he was getting better again. Anytime you beat those horses you've got to be excited.

"Going into the race, I've got to feel good about it. He put in a very good effort last week and he's had a good week. He seems to have come out of the race okay. Any time you step behind a field of horses like that, you don't know because they're all capable of doing it. Bee A Magician is a very nice horse. Resolve is a very nice horse. JL Cruze, when he's on his A game he's a very nice horse. And then you've got the closers – Intimidate, Flanagan Memory and all those guys. So you go into the race, hoping for the best but you've got to have some great luck for the simple reason they are all capable of doing it. They all have a license to be in the race."

Yoder's one-man operation of this horse has allowed him to take his time, not having to answer to anyone. There are few horsemen that have a horse of this caliber they own, drive and train – and do the blacksmith work. This is old-school all the way. It's like the guy who owns the small store in the neighborhood competing against the big-box stores.

"What amazes me about the whole thing is how professional everybody is at this level – drivers, trainers, owners – and it's a big honor just to be in there with those guys and having fun," he says.

Prior to this horse, he never had anything close enough to regularly compete in these big races. He is that once-in-a-lifetime horse.

"I was lucky to fall across him," Yoder says. "He just fit my program, and it just worked. It doesn't mean I'm better than the next guy out there, he just worked for me."

He bought him privately before he debuted as a two-year-old without having any idea he could be this good, let alone be less than $200,000 shy of reaching $1 million in earnings.

"I'd have never thought that, but if he does good he might become a millionaire," he says. "That would be a lot of fun, that would be exciting, but that's up to him. If he gets there, he gets there. I try not to think of winning $1 million. I've never had a horse that has made $1 million. He paid for the farm that I live on in Florida. I bought the farm before I bought him, but he's the one that paid it off."

It was in the winter of 2015 that Yoder had a chance to sit back and truly take in all that happened in 2014.

"If you think about it during the year you're going to get in trouble, but after it's all over and done with, that was pretty good," he said. "If it wasn't for him, I wouldn't have been able to do this. He's an unbelievable horse. He's done things that most horses don't."

NY Gaming Commission May Allow Uncoupled Entries

Keep your fingers crossed, horseplayers. At its Sept. 24 meeting the New York Gaming Commission will consider new rules that will allow the horses owned by common interests to race uncoupled in some harness races. The agenda for the meeting does not spell out exactly what new rules may be looked at, but it is possible that the same rule now applying to thoroughbred racing will be adopted for harness racing. In thoroughbreds, in any race worth $100,000 or more there are no entries.

Freaky Feet Pete Rolls to Ninth Straight Victory at Hoosier Park

By Emily Gaskin

ANDERSON, IN - Freaky Feet Pete continued his divisional dominance at Hoosier Park Racing & Casino on Thursday, September 17 as he cruised to his ninth straight victory in the featured event of the evening, the $75,000 Indiana Sires Stakes final for three-year-old pacing colts and geldings. Guided by regular driver Trace Tetrick, Freaky Feet Pete coasted to the wire under a hand drive to finish six lengths in front of his closest competitor and stop the timer in 1:49.4.

Freaky Feet Pete (Linscott Photography)

Leaving from post seven in the field of ten, Freaky Feet Pete was unhurried from the gate and settled along the rail in sixth. John DeLong had Swing City on a mission to the front and the Erv Miller trainee dictated first half fractions of :26.2 and :54.1 before ever feeling a threat from the rest of the field.

Tetrick gave Freaky Feet Pete the green light just past the half and the sophomore colt appeared to do the rest on autopilot. Ima Full Time Job and Jason Dillander were first to commit to the outer flow but were unable to gain on the leader. Freaky Feet Pete reached the leader's wheel at the third station in 1:22.2 and by the time the field turned for home his lead was ever-increasing.

While the rest of the field struggled to stay within striking distance, Freaky Feet Pete found another gear and used a :26.2 final quarter to find the wire first. American Virgin and Ricky Macomber Jr. rallied for second while Kelly D and Dale Hiteman rounded out the trifecta. As the overwhelming favorite, Freaky Feet Pete returned $2.10 at the betting window.

"I knew there would be a lot of early speed in the race," Tetrick said after the victory. "I didn't want to get tangled up with anyone early so I just wanted to float out of there and catch cover. I asked him a little around the last turn and that's really all I had to do. He did the rest. He's a great horse and loves what he's doing out there."

Trained by Larry Rheinheimer, Freaky Feet Pete scored his 18th career victory from 20 lifetime outings. The son of Rockin Image-Skyway Lori has now earned $482,100 lifetime for his owners Mary Jo Rheinheimer and Marty Rheinheimer, who incidentally celebrated a birthday today with the win. Rheinheimer's star pupil will now be aimed for the $100,000 Jenna's Beach Boy Invitational Pace at Hoosier Park on Saturday, September 26 for his next engagement.

"I paid the supplement so we will go to the Jenna's Beach Boy next week," Larry Rheinheimer said after the win. "As for the rest of the season, we will take it one start at a time. We'll get through these next couple of starts here and go from there but we'll do whatever is best for the horse. He will tell us what he wants to do. We haven't changed anything so far and it seems to be working."

The $100,000 Jenna's Beach Boy Invitational Pace will be part of a star-studded card slated for Saturday, September 26 at Hoosier Park. The evening's 14-race card will also include the $275,000 Kentuckiana Stallion Management Stakes trot and pace and the $225,000 Centaur Trotting Classic.

New Track Record at Saratoga

By Mike Sardella

Joe Larry N Curly (Roll With Joe) broke the track record for two year old pacers on Thursday at Saratoga Casino and Raceway. The Mark Harder-trained freshman colt was the public's overwhelming betting favorite in the $73,712 New York Sire Stake race on a beautiful afternoon in the Spa City. Jim Morrill Jr. piloted the two year old pacing star and moved him to the lead going to the opening quarter. Only briefly confronted in the mile, Joe Larry N Curly was confidently piloted and well in hand at the wire while a measured one length winner in 1:53.1. The win time bested the previous mark of 1:53.3 for a freshman pacing colt set by Heston Blue Chip on the Night of Champions at Saratoga in 2011. The victory moved Joe Larry N Curly's record to five for eight in the win column for the breakout freshman star of the NY Sire Stakes who will head into next week's Night of Champions as one of the favorites. Harder won the other $73,712 division of the NYSS as well as his Autotune Hanover (Art Major) cruised to victory in 1:54.2 with Tyler Buter at the lines. For Autotune Hanover, it was the fourth win in eight tries on the season.
