Second Standardbred Horse Sales Company session stabilizes off rollercoaster opener

by Ray Cotolo

Following an opening day that saw a 13 per cent drop in average year-over-year, the second session of the Standardbred Horse Sales Company auction at the Farm Show Complex in Harrisburg, PA, presented level offerings throughout the day on Tuesday (Nov. 4) to more stable year-over-year figures.

In 2024, the second session saw 379 yearlings sell for $14,973,000 gross for an average of $39,507 for a total across two sessions of $31,531,000 and an average of $59,604. The second session of the 2025 sale grossed shy of the 2024 number at $14,301,000 from 371 horses sold for an average of $38,547 – a decrease of 2.4 per cent. Across the two sessions in 2025, the Standardbred Horse Sales Company has grossed $30,594,000, a 2.97 per cent decrease year-over-year, with 541 yearlings sold for an average of $56,550, improving on the Monday decrease to just miss the previous year's average by 5.1 per cent.

"I think it was a little more level than what it was [Monday, Nov. 3]," said Dale Welk, president/director of operations for the Standardbred Horse Sales Company. "I'm really happy for the buyers. I think the buyers, in some cases, got some really, really nice animals at a good price. Again, today, anybody could look at the sale sheets and see they went to a lot of good homes – real good homes. That's helpful for the breeders."

The second session saw the most offerings from pacing stallion Papi Rob Hanover and trotting stallion Captain Corey, the latter of which grossed the most for the session at $1.6 million from 30 yearlings after having 10 sell on opening day. Captain Corey, sired by the enigmatically fast Googoo Gaagaa, emerged as a hot-buzz stallion at this year's Lexington Selected Yearling Sale with the fourth-highest gross among stallions at $3.7 million, placing him behind perennial trotting leaders Walner, Chapter Seven, and Muscle Hill. Captain Corey led all stallions at the Tuesday session in Harrisburg with a gross of nearly $1.7 million, but averaged just $57,125 versus the $86,977 average he set at the Lexington Sale.

"I think some of the jury is still out a little bit on the Captain Coreys," Welk said. "You can see the real good ones, that are bred really well, are selling. The other ones, they are a little bit hesitant on. I think his don't have a whole lot to prove."

Through the two sessions, Chapter Seven and Walner remain the leading stallions in gross and average. Captaintreacherous and Captain Corey sit fourth in gross, however pacing stallions Cattlewash and Downbytheseaside currently sit third and fourth in average. Hanover Shoe Farms leads all consigners in gross at $10 million with Preferred Equine at $4.7 million, Concord Stud Farm at $3.8 million, and Alliance Bloodstock at $2 million.

"I think, in the end, we're going to be right there probably with what Lexington went through, about 3 to 5 per cent down," Welk said. "I think we're going to be pretty good tomorrow. I think we've got some really nice yearlings tomorrow and I'm looking forward to it. Tomorrow is when some bargains get bought and some of the horses that come out of there are tremendous. I think it'll stay pretty flat. Tomorrow you might even see more consistent pricing."

TOP BUYS

Ake Svanstedt added to his yearling battalion on Tuesday with the session's topper Hip #190, a Walner filly named Dance Of Victory purchased for $250,000 out of the Concord consignment. The filly, one of eight total Svanstedt has bought in Harrisburg, is the second foal from the Kadabra mare She Rocks Kemp, who is a half-sister to stakes winner Yannick G Kemp and stakes-placed Zephyr Kemp. "I bought horses that were planned when I came here," Svanstedt said. "We bought more horses in Lexington and we said we were going to buy eight or 10, maybe, in Harrisburg and we have eight now, so maybe it can be two more."

On the session topper, Svanstedt said, "I liked the video and the conformation on the horse. The family is good. I like Walner fillies and the mother's family was okay."

Andrew Harris signed the ticket on one of three horses that sold for $200,000 on Tuesday. Harris won the auction on Hip #382, a Downbytheseaside colt named Wouldyoulikeamint. He is the second foal from stakes-winning mare Double A Mint, who herself is out of a dam who also produced the half-million-dollar earners Ok Commander and Ok Boromir as well as the mare Ok Heavenly, the dam of 2025 Max Hempt winner Dandy Ideal.

"He was a Downbytheseaside, so that's what attracted me to him," Harris said. "We had good luck with Gala and Brandon Blvd, so we were looking for a 'Seaside' and that was the only one that I found that I was able to get my hand up on."

Writer's note: Gala, a filly Harris and company purchased from Diamond Creek Racing coming into October, coincidentally won the $100,000 Kentucky Sire Stakes final at Cumberland Run just 20 minutes after speaking about this yearling.

"He's a big, strong colt," Harris said. "That's what you like to see in the Downbytheseasides. Most of the good ones seem like they are big and strong. He was a big, strong colt and his video was very good and I just liked what I saw."

Unlike Harris' breakout 2-year-old Brandon Blvd, Wouldyoulikeamint is not Kentucky eligible, which Harris said was not a big concern.

"It all depends, we'll have to see when we get there," Harris said. "We have a stable in Kentucky now, so it's not a big deal to go to Ohio."

The final day of the yearling sale is today (Nov. 5). The mixed sale begins on Thursday (Nov. 6) and will continue through Friday (Nov. 7).

Brett Pelling purchased another of the $200,000 yearlings on the day in Hip #347, a Pebble Beach colt named August National. The colt is the sixth foal from the Western Terror mare Square Dancer, who is a half-sister to millionaire Allamerican Native and the stakes-winning mare Allamerican Nadia, who foaled near millionaire Apprentice Hanover.

Late in the Tuesday session, Brixton Medical AB bought the third of the three $200,000 yearlings in Hip #447, a Greenshoe colt named Detonate. The colt, out of the Windsong's Legacy mare Ilia, is a half-brother to stakes-winners and budding Midwest stallions In Range and Long Tom.

Svanstedt returned at the tail of the session with the fifth-highest purchase of the day with Hip #552, a Captain Corey colt named Red Storm Hanover. Svanstedt famously campaigned Captain Corey to a million-dollar campaign climaxed by his 1:51 victory in the 2021 Hambletonian. He paid $190,000 for the colt.

The closing session of the 2025 Standardbred Horse Sales Company yearling auction begins at 10 a.m. (EST) today (Nov. 5). Hips number 561 through 903 will cycle the ring before the Mixed Sale gets underway on Thursday (Nov. 6).

RACING INTO THE FUTURE

with BOB DUFF

Prediction markets aren't going away - harness racing needs to get in on the action

by Bob Duff

Prediction markets are all the rage in the betting industry, even if the people behind these so-called event contracts continue to insist they aren't betting.

About that - with an event contract offered by a prediction market site, you choose one side or another of a potential outcome, and then you back it financially.

If it sounds like betting, and it looks like betting, then it's probably betting.

It's also exactly why traditional betting sites are up in arms about the creation of these prediction markets.

All of that is beside the point we're trying to make here, though. The evidence overwhelmingly suggests that prediction markets aren't going away. In fact, they are only going to grow to be a bigger part of the gambling pie. And that's exactly why harness racing can't stand idly by and watch another opportunity get away.

The sport needs to get in on this prediction market action, and it needs to do so ASAP.

WHAT ARE PREDICTION MARKETS?

Prediction markets operate similarly to a commodities exchange, as opposed to a betting site. Instead of placing bets against the house as you would wager at an online sports betting app, with prediction markets, you are choosing one side or the other of an outcome and banking on that outcome to happen. The event is on when others choose to back the opposing side of the outcome in a peer-to-peer competition.

In fact, not only do prediction markets work like a commodities exchange, but that's also who regulates these sites. Prediction market sites are federally regulated by the U.S. Commodities Futures Trading Commission (CFTC). Instead of the vigorish, or vig, that you pay to the sportsbook on a sports bet, prediction markets require payment of a trading fee.

Sites such as Kalshi and Polymarket are not only increasing in stature in the U.S. market, but these prediction markets are growing rapidly in popularity. As CFTC-licensed entities, they can offer event contracts in all 50 states.

That's got the collective backs up of online sports betting sites operating in the U.S. market. Sports betting apps like DraftKings, FanDuel, and ESPN Bet are all regulated by state gaming commissions. And they don't operate in many U.S. states.

Being federally regulated, the rules for playing an event contract with a prediction market are identical in every state. With state-regulated online sports betting, there are nuances in every state that impact how the rules of engagement work in each particular state.

Since the sportsbook operators are convinced that prediction markets offering event contracts are merely sports betting

With prediction markets, you could deliberately back a horse to lose a race. Say there was an event contract in which you could choose to back a prohibitive favorite to not be the winner of a major stakes race. Imagine the price you could get on that contract.

sites operating incognito, they are demanding that states move to prohibit the operation of these prediction markets.

They are trying to do just that in many states. For the most part, though, they aren't having much success.

PREDICTION MARKETS GOING MAINSTREAM

Here's another reason why prediction markets won't be going away. Both Kalshi and Polymarket, the two largest prediction market sites in the world, list Donald Trump, Jr. as an investor. In fact, the eldest son of the current U.S. President also sits on the board of both companies.

If anyone thinks that Donald Trump is going to allow these sites to be shut down while they're making money for his family, well, you just haven't been paying attention to the way the U.S. government operates.

The prediction markets are going mainstream. Polymarket has a deal in place that sees it listed as the official prediction market site of X, the social media site formerly known as Twitter.

In late October, the NHL announced multiyear U.S. agreements with Polymarket and Kalshi. The league named both Kalshi and Polymarket as official prediction market partners of the NHL.

Around the same time, DraftKings announced the acquisition of Railbird Exchange, a prediction market site. It will be rebranded and relaunched as DraftKings Predictions.

That's right. The sportsbooks have decided that if they can't beat the prediction markets, they might as well join them. It's the same approach harness racing should be taking. The sport needs to get in on the prediction market action.

YOU CAN BACK A HORSE TO LOSE

If you bet on the horses, then you've backed plenty of horses to lose. Not intentionally, mind you, but in actuality, it happens more often than not to horseplayers.

With prediction markets, you could deliberately back a horse to lose a race. Say there was an event contract in which you could choose to back a prohibitive favorite to not be the winner of a major stakes race. Imagine the price you could get on that contract.

The beauty of backing an outcome is that you are setting the prices. As more people back opposing sides of an outcome, the marketplace is constantly changing. And you can get in and get out whenever you desire by buying or selling a contract on an event.

Prediction markets were made for horse racing. And that's why harness racing needs to find a path to become part of this emerging form of betting. The sport simply can't afford to yet again be standing by and watching others benefit from a great idea.

Faster than ever

by Trey Nosrac

An older HRU column by Brett Sturman titled "What is Driving Speed Records" recently caught my eye. A few days after reading the column, I watched my 3-year-old trotting filly race a mile in 1:59. This satisfying event turned slightly depressing when I calculated a 1:49 trotter winning this race would cross the finish line before my filly made the final turn. The performances of racehorses that Sturman highlighted would be science fiction 30 years ago.

Trey began writing about sports during the reign of Lance Armstrong. The American cyclist was a hero for many, a thorn in the side of others. From the beginning of his reign, despite his vehement protestations of innocence and aggressive lawyering, my opinion was that Armstrong and other cyclists were blood doping.

But rumors are not evidence. Eventually, the U.S. Anti-Doping Agency declared Armstrong guilty. On Oprah, he admitted systemic abuse of a drug named erythropoietin to increase red blood cells. Armstrong's misdeeds and the doping of many other cyclists crawled into the light, but it took a decade, while editors and writers had to bite their pens. Armstrong's seven Tour de France wins got erased, but the doping stain remained.

The Tour de France winner this year was a Slovenian, Tadej Pogačar. Pogačar is only 26 years old, and this is his fourth consecutive Tour De France triumph. Here is a tidbit to ponder. Performance-wise, the blood-altered Lance Armstrong would be far back in the pack next to Pogačar today. After the tainted past of cycling participants, one's suspicion radar goes into active mode.

In 2025, there are many more tools and tests than 20 years ago; there may be more of everything, but after scrolling, I found no evidence that Pogačar is doping. Scouring all published sources regarding the famed racer, even AI gives the rider a clean bill.

“As of July 28, 2025, no verified scientific or regulatory evidence exists that Tadej Pogačar has doped. Until proven otherwise, he remains part of a new generation of elite riders under scrutiny and transparency.”

To me, this makes Pogačar’s dominance amazing. I want to believe this guy is legit, but some of our brains can’t help being leery. A segment of people will always be cynical when they witness record performances never before witnessed. The same suspicions hold in horse racing. Another explanation is possible.

There is little doubt that today’s elite humans and animals are bigger, stronger, and faster. Data verifies that the current contestants for the Tour de France podium are speedier and better than ever. Most horse racing people think this overall breed improvement holds for racehorses. But how does a data-driven world of cell phones, solving the human geometric code, Artificial Intelligence, and nuclear biology play into the performance improvements in every sport, including ours?

The past decade has been remarkable on almost every level. How does the new level of human performance in cycling apply to harness horse racing and other sports?

In our sport, we do not appear to go to the extremes that cyclists such as Tadej Pogačar do, which is probably good. Let’s stroll through the preparation and training in the sport of cycling. As we walk, ask yourself if you think this degree of scientific competition would be suitable for our ancient sport? In bicycle racing, there is an astonishing amount of new data and a large army of personnel behind top cyclists.

Every rider has a power meter fitted and attached to their bike to understand their numbers in a constant, real-time way, including heart rate, speed, and other measurements.

Riders and their teams publish their data on Strava and similar training apps.

Massive data collection and apps enable humans to live on the edge of their capacities more effectively than they used to.

Cycling has accelerated in the last 20 years because of the evolution of science across many dimensions. New, updated data is available daily.

Highly accurate long-range weather forecasting can predict the wind speed and direction for a given race on a given day and help teams decide how to use aerodynamics: heavier wheels over lighter ones that produce more wind and water resistance.

The improvement in equipment is relentless. A bike is limited to a minimum weight (about 15 pounds). Still, as long as it meets specific regulations of dimension and geometry, its drag coefficient can be wind tunnel–tested to ridiculous degrees.

Everything in bike racing is subject to aerodynamic imperative: the rider’s helmet, jersey, shoes, bikes, wheels, and clothing. Less drag means more speed, and fewer wasted watts maintaining that speed.

Nutrition is off the charts. Riders are fueling in different ways from what they did in the past. Twenty years ago, riders believed that fasting was the way to go. In the past few years, it’s become public knowledge that that is the opposite of what should maximize performance.

Riders know precisely how many grams of food to eat and how often to consume them. They eat energy bars, gels, and follow strict diets using technology that shows on their apps how many grams of which foods are acceptable.

Today’s rising stars generation of cyclists do not know a world where ignoring data and apps is possible; they can’t compete without them.

Everyone is an incrementalist in cycling; the concept is to make 100 tiny changes that add up.

And on and on. The boundaries get pushed for humans and machines. Some of us feel that the more science in sports, the less magic in sports. We want to go back to the good old days. There probably never were the good old days of clean cycling. There probably never were good old days of pristine harness horse racing.

The sporting audience is complicated. Fans look for heroes, they look for villains, and they are always suspicious. Every losing wager has a gambler looking for justification. To counter the raised eyebrows, abnormal athletic gains in performance are attributed to everything from magic to technology, physiology, and mental superiority. Modern gains may also be related to maximizing potential due to sports science.

Doping may still exist in cycling. For example, microdosing with carbon monoxide to mimic the effect of altitude training is a practice recently banned in cycling. Another way to cheat is mechanical doping, with tiny hidden motors placed within the bicycle frame or hub wheel. The policing goes on.

And so it goes. The underbelly of sports has never been pretty. Cheaters cheat, and the innocent suffer. Lines are blurry. Every sport’s technological and data-based improvements thrill some and depress others. Consider Trey depressed for a pair of reasons.

- 1 – Science is not free. The little guy operating on oats and water will always be disadvantaged.
- 2 – If Tadej Pogačar is playing fair, the tainted past of previous eras will not allow him to receive the full measure of his due recognition.

Twin B Joe Fresh recovering from surgery, aiming for 2026 return

by Ken Weingartner / USTA media relations manager

Twin B Joe Fresh, who was scratched from her start in the Breeders Crown Mare Pace on Oct. 25 at Woodbine Mohawk Park, is recovering from surgery Tuesday (Nov. 4) at New Bolton Center in Pennsylvania for a hairline fracture of her left front cannon bone, trainer/co-owner Chris Ryder said today. A CT scan on Monday revealed the injury, which was originally thought to be a bruised foot.

"She is doing well, and the prognosis is very, very good," Ryder said. "We want to thank everybody for their concern and for following and supporting her. We're pretty sure that she will be able to return at 100 per cent, and as long as everything stays good, that we're going to race next year."

Twin B Joe Fresh was the 2024 Dan Patch Horse of the Year and is No. 6 in the most recent Hambletonian Society/Breeders Crown poll, making her the sport's top-ranked older pacer. She hit the board in all nine of her races this season, winning six and earning $526,714. Her triumphs included a second consecutive win in the Grade 1 Roses Are Red, as well as four additional graded stakes.

For her career, the 5-year-old daughter of Roll With Joe—Fresh Breeze has finished in the top three in 47 of 49 races, with 36 victories and $2.86 million in earnings. She is owned by Ryder, driver Dexter Dunn, Pete Trebotica, and Barry Spak.

Winter Is Coming Series starts at Pocono

With the number of days left in the 2025 racing season at Pocono Downs at Mohegan Pennsylvania down to single numbers, director of racing Rick Kane has devised a two-legs-and-a-championship series for both trotters and pacers called the "Winter Is Coming" Series to create year-end extra excitement, and on Monday (Nov. 3) the pacers contested two $12,500 opening round prelims.

The excitement factor was evident in the faster of the day's two Winter Is Coming cuts, as the Betterthancheddar gelding Agedchedar Hanover (note that deliberate spelling) closed from third-over to win in a four-horse blanket finish in 1:52.4. The winner came home in :28.1 against the wind to defeat Points North by a head for trainer Jake Leamon and owner Dona McDonald.

The other section went to the only 3-year-old to enter in the first leg prelim, the Cattlewash gelding Expedited Service, and the sophomore might turn out to be the horse to beat in the series. Though his mile was clocked in 1:54.3, Expedited Service went his third quarter in :26.4 with the wind to easily clear from first-over and drew off to a 4½ length victory for driver George Napolitano, Jr., trainer Richard Johnson, and owner Guy Gemore.

Top purse of the card was the $15,500 offered for developing trotters, with the stakes sophomore filly Margareta Hanover taking command in front of the stands the first time and then posting a new mark of 1:55.4 in winning by open distance. Mattias Melander handled the Maharajah filly for trainer/brother Marcus (who was at the opening day of the Harrisburg Sale) and, appropriately given that reference, owners Hanover Shoe Farms Inc.

Anthony Napolitano led the driving colony with three winners; Braxten Boyd, meet leader Tyler Buter, James Kennedy, and Napolitano, Jr. each had two. "Anthony Nap" earned another distinction by guiding $66.40 winner Costa Diva, giving him a meet-leading 11 "bombers" brought home at Pocono this year. Double Up N also got in the longshot fun by paying $56.40 under Kevin Wallis's guidance in the first race (only the second bomber to open the card among Pocono's 52 $50+ winners this meet, which includes seven in the last seven cards).
